LARGO,

INCLUDING LARGO (UPPER & LOWER) & LUNDIN.

LARGO is a parish on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, at the head of Largo bay, in the small debt court district of Cupar, and contains the villages of Upper or Kirkton of Largo, Lundin Links and Lower Largo, the latter a small seaport with a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. And there is another station at Lundin Links, one mile from Largo. The parish is 4 miles in extent from north to south by 3 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Ceres, east by Kilconquhar and Newburn, and west by Scoonie. A striking feature in the landscape is Largo Law, a conical hill, rising to a height of 950 feet above the level of the sea, and green to the summit, where it is cleft in two. From its top a splendid view of the Firth of Forth, with its islands, and the opposite shore of the Lothians is obtained. The minerals worked are coal and limestone, the latter being most excellent in quality. The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here, and there is also a Savings Bank. Largo was the birthplace of Sir Andrew Wood, a celebrated admiral in the reign of James III. who presented him with the barony of Largo in recognition of his services, and the shore for an extent of 5 miles is still claimed by his descendants. Sir John Leslie, the philosopher, was also born here. Within the grounds of Largo House is a conical-topped tower, which formed part of the old castle built by Sir Andrew Wood. This tower, it is said, was built by the prisoners taken by Sir Andrew in his sea fights. Lower Largo was the birthplace, about 1676, of Alexander Selkirk, rendered famous by the pen of De Foe as "Robinson Crusoe." A descendant, named Catherine Selkirk, was resident in this village until her death, in 1862. Mr. David Gillies, of Cardy works, also a descendant of the family, has erected, on the site of his birthplace, a life-size bronze statue to Alexander Selkirk, which was unveiled 11th December, 1885, by the Earl of Aberdeen. The tablet bears the inscription—"In memory of Alexander Selkirk, mariner, the original of Robinson Crusoe, who lived in the island of Juan Fernandez, in complete solitude, for four years and four months. He died 1723, Lieut. of H.M.S. Weymouth, aged 47 years." The Simpson Institute Hall, opened May 8th, 1891, was erected by means of a legacy of £4,000 bequeathed by Mrs. Galloway in memory of her father, George Simpson, of Upper Largo. It is an edifice of stone, in the old Scottish style, and is devoted to educational, recreative and social purposes: the interior contains a public hall, library and billiard room, and attached are grounds with a bowling green and tennis court. The institute is controlled by a board of trustees. Wood's Hospital, which stands in the Kirktown of Largo, was erected under an endowment by Mr. John Wood, a native of this place, for "any man or woman of the name of Wood," to whatever part of Scotland he or she may belong. The foundation provides the inmates with two rooms each, beds and bedding, and the produce of the gardens. The parish church is in Upper Largo, and has in the transept a memorial window to Sir Andrew Wood, before named. A Celtic cross of unknown date, found in the parish in the year 1839 by General Durham, then proprietor of Largo, now stands in the parish churchyard. Largo house is a spacious mansion built in 1750, situated a little to the west of the village on a slope with southern aspect, amid richly ornamented grounds; it is the property of Mrs. Maitland-Makgill-Crichton, but now the residence of Benjamin C. Cox esq. The soil is partly of a light character, but more commonly of a black loam. The inhabitants are mainly devoted to agricultural pursuits, and the chief crops are wheat, oats, potatoes, rye and flax. Lt.-Col. Sir John Gilmour bart. D.S.O., M.P. Mrs.Maitland-Makgill-Crichton, Major John Arthur Briggs and Captain Noel Baxter are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 7,371 acres; gross value, £25,058; the population in 1911 was 2,274. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,132.

LOWER LARGO is a fishing village in this parish, 1 mile south-west from Upper Largo, 2½ miles north-east from Leven and 3½ south-west from Colinsburgh, on the shore of an indentation of the Firth of Forth, called Largo bay; it stands at the efflux of a rivulet named the Keil, whose estuary forms a harbour to the place.

LUNDIN MILL (now known as Lundin Links) is a village adjoining Lower Largo, with a station on the North British railway. A square tower, which formed part of the ancient castle of Lundin, still remains. Here also are the three "Standing Stones of Lundin," supposed to have once formed part of a Druidical temple. LASSODIE, see BEATH.

LESLIE is a parish, a burgh of barony and police burgh and a manufacturing town, the latter comprising the burghs of Leslie and the outlying districts of Croftonterly and Prinlaws, and having a terminal station on the Markinch and Leslie branch of the North British railway, 12 miles east from Kinross, 12 south-west from Cupar, 9 north-west from Kirkcaldy and 3 west from Markinch. The parish is in the poor combination district of Dysart and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded north by Falkland, east by Markinch, south by Kinglassie, and west by Portmoak (Kinrossshire). The town, consisting principally of one street, running from east to west, is an ancient place, often frequented by King James when holding court at Falkland, and is governed by a council, consisting of a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The streets are lighted with gas. At the eastern entrance to the town is a public green, which in former times was the scene of various pastimes, and the place of annual meeting for the pedlars or packmen of Scotland. A fine stone monument has been erected on the green at a cost of £800, by public subscription, to those who fell in the Great War. The increase of this town is attributable to the prosperity of its manufactures, consisting of flax spinning and bleaching and paper making, the works standing chiefly on the banks of the Leven. There is a branch here of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited. The places of worship are the parish church, a quoad sacra church at Prinlaws, at the west end of the town, two United Free churches, and a Baptist chapel. There is a library, consisting of about 1,200 volumes, and reading room connected with the Young Men's Christian Association. A fair is held on the first Tuesday after the 11th of April. Major Robert S. Nairn, Robert Tullis esq. and the Kirkcaldy and Dysart Water Commissioners are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 4,944 acres; rateable value, £21,652 landward; area of burgh, 99 acres; rateable value, £8,928; population in 1911, 3,869, viz.:— Burgh, 2,142; landward, 1,727. Population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911: Parish church, 2,657; Prinlaws, 1,390.

WALKERTON is a village in the parishes of Leslie and Kinglassie.

LETHAM, see MONIMAIL.

LEUCHARS is a parish and village on the sea coast to the north of St. Andrews bay; the village is 5 miles north-west from St. Andrews, and has a station on the St. Andrews, Leuchars and Tayport section of the North British railway, and half a mile south is the station of Leuchars junction, on the North British main line. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Cupar, is about 5 miles from north to south, by the same in extent in width, and is bounded on the north by Forgan and Ferry-Port-on-Craig, west by Logie and south by the Eden. The ancient Established church, supposed to have been erected in the 12th century, is one of the most perfect examples of Norman architecture in Scotland: in 1914 the ancient chancel and apse were restored at a cost of £1,400, and now form part of the church. There is also a Mission church and St. Saviour's Episcopal church at Guard Bridge, and a United Free church. The Pitcairn Institute, the gift of the late Mrs. Pitcairn, of Pitcullo, contains a library and reading rooms, and has recreation grounds attached to it. The St. Michael's Golf Club, established here in 1904, now numbers 150 members, and has a course of nine holes. At Guard Bridge, in this parish, are the works of the Guard Bridge Paper Co. Limited, and here also is a station on the North British railway. Balmullo, a small village, is also in this parish. Near Leuchars is the old castle of Earlshall, which has been restored by its owner, R. W. R. Mackenzie esq. J.P. The parish comprises 13,409 acres; rateable value, £22,965; the population in 1911 was 2,605.

BALMULLO and LUCKLAWHILL form a village in the parishes of Leuchars and Logie.

LEVEN is a town in the parish of Scoonie and is bounded on the west by the river Leven, which here runs into the Firth of Forth, and is crossed by a bridge. As a seaside resort Leven attracts a large number of visitors during the summer months. Inner Leven, connected with Leven by a stone bridge over the Leven, has, in conjunction with Buckhaven and Methil, been made into a police burgh. The town, which is in the debt court district of Cupar, is 9 miles north-east of Kirkcaldy and 3 south-west from Largo, and has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, about a quarter of a mile from the town. The Wemyss and District Tramway Co. Limited also opened a new line, 25 Aug. 1906, connecting the town of Leven with Kirkcaldy. The town is irregularly built, and consists of three main streets and a collection of houses bordering the links, where three golf clubs are established, with three good club houses. There is an excellent water supply, which provides also for Lundin Links and Methil Docks. The police burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The staple trade of Leven is the preparation and spinning of flax, and seed crushing, paper making, engineering &c. the mills of the first-named trade especially employing a considerable number of hands; there are a bone dust mill, salt works and rope walks, as well as a large timber yard and saw mill. In the district are collieries. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Royal Bank of Scotland. A fair is held on the Thursday after the third Monday in July. The Greig Institute, erected in 1873, contains a news room, library, billiard room and a class room for technical instruction; its name was adopted in compliment to Mr. Greig, of Glencarse, who gave the site and £1,000 towards the building fund. The Established church was erected in 1903 at a cost of £5,000, in place of the old church, then demolished: there are also two United Free churches and a Baptist chapel: the Episcopal church of St. Margaret of Scotland, built in 1881, will seat 200 persons; the rectory, value £270, has been held since 1919 by the Rev. Francis Charles Newbery M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. There is also an institute and a reading room. A large public school was erected in 1893, at a cost of £10,000, for 1,200 children, and another in 1910, for 480 children, at a cost of £8,400. The hospital was built in 1910, at a cost of £1,500, as a memorial to the late David Bain esq.; it contains two wards with five beds each. A bequest by the late Edward Boase, of Leven, of £500, yields a bursary of £25, tenable for three years, and the late Alexander Balfour, a former resident of Leven, left £12 per annum for three bursaries for boys or girls. The Caledonian hotel is near the bay shore, and has a large posting establishment attached. The "Leven Advertiser" is published every Thursday, price one penny. The area of the burgh is 173 acres; rateable value, £33,582; population in 1901, 5,577, and in 1911, 6,559; population of the wards:—First, 4,128; Second, 1,260; Third, 1,171.

LIBERTY, see ELIE.

LIMEKILNS is a small village, and with the creek of Brucehaven forms a small harbour on the north bank of the Firth of Forth, in the parish of Dunfermline and parliamentary division of West Fife, 4 miles west from North Queensferry and 3 south of Dunfermline town, and has a United Free church. The adjoining village of CHARLESTOWN forms a part of the port, and contains a station on the Dunfermline and Charlestown branch of the North British railway, opened for passenger traffic 1st September, 1894. There is a shipbuilding yard at Brucehaven, and at Charlestown, which is the property of the Earl of Elgin, and contains a harbour formed by him, but now owned by the North British Railway Co. Large quantities of coal and lime are shipped; there are also two salt works and a lime kiln and an iron foundry.

Post & M. O. Office, Limekilns; Mrs. Mackay, postmistress. Letters received through Dunfermline. The nearest telegraph office is at Charlestown, 1 mile distant LOCHGELLY is a town, ecclesiastical parish formed from Auchterderran and Ballingry, and police burgh partly in the parish of Auchterderran with a small portion in the parish of Ballingry, and has a station on the Thornton and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, 7 miles west from Kirkcaldy, 8 north-east from Dunfermline, and 6 north from Burntisland. In 1912 the burgh was enlarged by the addition of 92 acres taken from Auchterderran and Ballingry. The loch, which is about a mile south-east, has an area of 100 acres. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches, and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St Finnian; the Rev. Richard Henry Jones has been priest in charge since 1919. There are also branches of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in coal mining. A newspaper is published here. The ruins of Lochore Castle are about a mile distant. The area of the burgh is 360 acres; gross valuation, £30,620; population in 1901, 5,472 burgh; ecclesiastical parish, 8,496, and in 1911, burgh, 9,956; ecclesiastical parish, 14,304.

MARKINCH is a parish extending 5 miles from north to south by 2 to 3 in breadth, in the poor combination of Kirkcaldy and Dysart, and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and bounded north by Kettle, east by Kennoway, south by Dysart and Wemyss, and west by Kinglassie and Leslie. Its kirktown, which has a station on the main line of the North British railway, lies 10 miles south west from Cupar, 8 north from Kirkcaldy and 6 west of Leven, and is a police burgh and is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 6 commissioners. It occupies an open situation on a piece of irregular rising ground, and on the highest part is seated the church. There are extensive paper mills, bleachfields and a woollen manufactory. The districts round abound in coal. In the village there are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and of the Royal Bank of Scotland. There is a town hall. The Municipal buildings, erected in 1899, were the gift of Edward Balfour esq. of Balbirnie. The places of worship include a church of the Establishment and United Free churches. The parish is traversed by the streams of the Leven and the Orr, and the great road through the county crosses it. The North British railway is carried over the first-named river by means of a viaduct of ten arches, nearly 90 feet in height. Balgonie Castle, the property of C. B. Balfour esq. C.B. of Newton Don, but now a ruin, stands on the south bank of the Leven, in the midst of some finely-wooded grounds. About half a mile to the east is Balfour House, also the property of C. B. Balfour esq. C.B. and now (1921) vacant. Balbirnie, an elegant mansion, is the seat of Edward Balfour esq. D.L., J.P. and lies about half a mile north-west of the village. Edward Balfour esq. of Balbirnie, and Charles Barrington Balfour esq. C.B., D.L., J.P. of Balgonie and Newton Don, are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 9,694 acres; rateable value of Markinch, with Windygates, landward, £53,654; burghal, £8,547; area of burgh, 120 acres; population in 1901, 6,803 in the civil parish, including 1,499 in the burgh, and in 1911, 8,058, including 9 officials and 153 inmates in Dysart Combination Poorhouse, and 1,641 in the burgh. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 3,975.

WINDYGATES, now the head of a post district, in this parish, stands on the high road between Markinch and Leven, about 2 miles west from the latter. Contiguous to the village is the extensive distillery of the Distillers' Company Limited. Close to Windygates is Cameron Bridge, a station on the Leven and East of Fife railway.

WOODSIDE, in the parish of Markinch, is a small village about one mile and a half south-west from Markinch, its post town, and 2 from Thornton. The inhabitants are chiefly employed at the paper mills and bleachfields in the neighbourhood. Population in 1911, 369. The nearest railway station is Markinch.

MILTOWN, or Milton of Balgonie, is a village about midway between Windygates and Markinch, in the parish of Markinch, and quoad sacra parish. The nearest railway station is Markinch, a mile and a half distant. There is an Established church here. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 2,262.

COALTOWN, or Coalton of Balgonie, lies one mile and a half south from Markinch, its post town and parish. The Queen Victoria Memorial Hall here was erected in 1906 and is licensed for theatrical entertainments. The inhabitants are principally employed at the Balgonie colliery and bleachfields in the immediate neighbourhood. Population in 1911, 907. The nearest railway station is Markinch.

THORNTON is a village in the civil parish of Markinch, and quoad sacra parish formed from Markinch, Kirkcaldy and Dysart and Kinglassie civil parishes; it is near the south-eastern extremity of the parish, and close to the Thornton junction on the Edinburgh, Perth and Dundee section of the North British and the Leven and East of Fife railways, which have a joint station here. The Kirkcaldy and Dysart Poor Combination Poorhouse, erected in 1862, at a cost of about £6,000, and situated about half a mile from the village, is available for 195 inmates. There is a chapel of the Established church and a United Free church hall. Cattle sales are held here every Monday. Population in 1911, village, 1,870; ecclesiastical parish, 2,263.

BALCURVIE is situated on an eminence about half a mile from Windygates, its post town, in the parish of Markinch, about 3 miles east from the latter place, one mile south from Kennoway, and half a mile from Cameron Bridge, a station on the Leven and East of Fife railway. Here is a Mission hall.

AUCHMUTY and Balbirnie Mills form a village in Markinch parish.

ISLE OF MAY. This small island, only 1 mile by three-quarters in extent, is nevertheless the largest and most interesting in the Firth of Forth; at its widest part it is about one-third of a mile across, and its highest point is not more than 150 feet above the sea level; the shore is extremely rough, stretching out on the north and east into low jagged rocks, and rising on the west and south in precipitous cliffs; there are three landing places, one on the north-west, called "Altar Stones," and two on the east side, of which one, called "Kirk Haven," is a narrow inlet inclosed by rocks; the surface of the island is mostly grass, but is very uneven. On the island is a lighthouse, with a light on the dioptric or refracting principle, visible at 21 miles. The island, though included in the county of Fife, is in the civil parish of Anstruther Wester, and lies at the mouth of the Firth of Forth, 6 miles south-east of Cellardyke and the same distance south-east-by-south from Crail. Above Kirk Haven, on a slope below the lofty cliffs, overhanging the Pilgrims' Haven, are some remains of a priory once existing here, and consisting of a small and long ruinous building, known as St. Adrian's chapel, which in Oct. 1868 was repaired under the direction of the Board of Works; it is a simple rectangular structure, running north and south, internally about 32 feet in length, and is probably of the 13th century: on the west side are two small and deeply splayed windows, obtusely pointed, and portions of others; since its first erection, a circular tower, pierced with oillets, has been built on to the south-west angle of the chapel, and a low structure, with traces of vaulting, across the entire north end. There are several wells on the island, but good water has to be obtained from Crail; the inhabitants keep poultry, cows and sheep, and cultivate barley and vegetables. The population in 1911 was 16.

MILTOWN, see MARKINCH.

MONIMAIL is a parish, in the northern part of the county, and in the small debt court district of Cupar, its kirktown being 5 miles west of Cupar. It is bounded on the north by Dunbog, Creich and Moonzie, on the south by Cults and Collessie, on the east by Cupar, and on the west by Abdie; it is 5 miles from north to south by a breadth of 4. Collessie, 1 mile distant, on the Perth and Ladybank section of the North British railway, is the nearest station. The northern parts consist of a fine range of hills, the highest of which is called Mount Hill. The monument to the late Earl of Hopetoun, erected on its summit, is a plain Doric column, 92 feet in height, and within is a narrow spiral staircase giving access to the top, whence a fine view of the valley of the Eden and the Firths of Forth and Tay is obtained. The greater portion of the parish is in a high state of cultivation, the remainder being pasture and woodland. The parish church at Monimail is a handsome building, and contains nearly 600 sittings. There is also a United Free church at the Bow of Fife. Fernie Castle, a place of great antiquity, and once of considerable strength, is now the residence of William Keir Balfour esq. Melville House is the residence of Mrs. Milbank-Leslie-Melville. The Earl of Leven and Melville, William Keir Balfour esq. James Dunn esq. and Henry W. Hope esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,548 acres; rateable value, £9,481; population in 1911, 694.

Bow of Fife is a hamlet in the parish, 1½ miles south-east from the kirktown. Springfield is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant.

Easter Fernie is a hamlet in the parish. Cupar is the nearest railway station, 3½ miles distant.

Letham is a village in the parish. The nearest railway station is at Collessie, 1¾ miles distant.

Post Office, Bow of Fife (Monimail); Miss Helen Page, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Springfield, which is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 2 miles distant NEWBURGH is a royal burgh and a parish on the south shore of the Firth of Tay, 33 miles north from Edinburgh, 11 south-east from Perth, 10 north-west from Cupar, and has a station on the Ladybank, Newburgh and Perth section of the North British railway. The town consists of one long street lying east and west, parallel with the course of the river, and a few streets leading towards the shore, where there are quays for shipping and a spacious harbour. The Tay up to this point is navigable for vessels of about 400 tons, and from here to Perth during spring tides for vessels of 300 tons. According to some authorities the town owes its origin to the patronage of the adjacent abbey of Lindores, founded in 1178 by David, Earl of Huntingdon, on his return from the Holy Land. In the year 1266 the town was erected into a burgh of regality, and in 1631 Charles I. granted to the place a charter, forming the community into a royal burgh. There is, however, no evidence of it ever having sent a member to the Scottish parliament. The government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors, with a treasurer and a town clerk, and is a police burgh. The parish, which extends 3 miles from north to south, by 1 to 2 broad, is bounded east by Abdie, south by Collessie, and west by Abernethy in Perthshire. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, and also a savings bank. The manufacture of linen and oilskin goods may be considered the staple trades of the place, exclusive of which the business in corn and potatoes is considerable; and there is a large floor cloth factory; the salmon fishery and the sale of fruit are also of importance; there are also stone quarries. The name of Newburgh is supposed to have been conferred upon it in contradistinction to the ancient decayed burgh of Abernethy, which lies about three miles to the west. The Town Hall stands near the centre of the town. The Laing Institute, erected in 1895 and incorporating the Free Library, owes its origin to a bequest of Alexander Laing LL.D. of this town, who left £1,000 for the building and £400 as an endowment fund, together with his own valuable library. There are about 4,200 volumes in the lending department and 3,700 in the reference department. There is a Public Hall, seating 650, and a Masonic Hall, seating 300. In the High street is a fountain, erected as a memorial to John Livingstone esq. of Edinburgh, who was the donor of the Livingstone Hall, a building in the Cupar road. The places of worship include the Established church of St. Catherine, erected in 1833, United Free and Evangelical Union churches and a Baptist chapel. There is also the Episcopal Mission Church of St. Katherine, of which the Rev. Norman Macdonald has been priest in charge since 1912. A fair is held on the third Friday in June. There are two ancient crosses within the parish, one at Mugdrum, about thirteen feet high, and the Macduff cross, now only fragmentary, but of great interest, from its having been granted to Macduff as a sanctuary for his successful aid against Macbeth. About a mile to the east are the remains of the abbey of Lindores. The unfortunate David Stewart, Duke of Rothsay, eldest son and heir of Robert III. who died at Falkland Palace, 26th March, 1402, was buried here. Several stone coffins have at different times been discovered and are still to be seen. Mrs. Amy Balfour Hay-Neave, John Howisson esq. Sir William Robertson and Col. James T. Cathcart D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 1,999 acres; area of burgh, 606 acres; rateable value, landward, £11,164 and burghal, £1,969. The population in 1911 was 1,898, viz.:—Royal burgh (part of), 1,747; landward, 151. The population of the royal burgh in 1911 was 1,977, of which 230 were in Abdie civil parish. Population of ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 1,865.

Part of the parish of Abdie has been added to the burgh.

Post, T., M. O. & T. E. D. Office, Newburgh; David McMillan, postmaster & sub-distributor of stamps. Letters should have Fifeshire added. Telegraph office open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; sundays, open 9 to 10 a.m. & for sale of stamps & delivery to callers, 12.30 to 1 p.m

NEWBURN is a parish, on the north-east coast of Largo Bay, its kirktown being 2 miles north-east from Largo, 5 from Leven, and 10 south-by-west from St. Andrews. The parish, which extends 3 miles from north to south by 1½ in breadth, is in the small debt court district of St. Andrews, and is bounded north and west by Largo, east by Elie and Kilconquhar, and south by the Bay of Largo. The nearest railway station is at Largo on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. Here is an Established church. Three-fourths of the land is under cultivation, and the inhabitants are dependent on agriculture for employment. Col. Charles Frederick St. Clair Anstruther M.V.O., D.S.O., J.P., W. J. Baird esq. J.P. Major N. E. Baxter, of Gilston, and Andrew J. Rintoul esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,046 acres; rateable value, £5,091. The population in 1911 was 283. NEWPORT AND WORMIT

NEWPORT, a handsome village and a police burgh, in the civil parish of Forgan and quoad sacra parish formed from Forgan, stretching along the Firth of Tay, is picturesquely situated, directly opposite to Dundee, and about 2 miles north therefrom, and 3 south-west from Tayport, the ground sloping upwards to a considerable height from the river Tay. Many villas have been erected here; and the climate being salubrious and comparatively mild, it has now become a popular suburb of Dundee. The south end of the Tay Bridge is at Wormit, about a mile to the west of Newport. There is a station on the North British railway at East Newport for goods and passengers, and one at West Newport for passengers only. Newport was made a burgh in November, 1887, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. It possesses five churches, a public hall, erected at a cost of £4,000, and a public park. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Mary, and the Rev. Charles Shakerley Coldwell M.A. has been rector since 1920. The area of the burgh is 458 acres; rateable value, £31,977. Population in 1911 was, burgh, 3,643, and ecclesiastical parish, 1,951. Population of the wards: First, 1,583; Second, 1,009; Third, 1,051.

WORMIT (now incorporated with Newport) is pleasantly and conveniently situated for Dundee business men; there is a station here on the North British line, and many villas overlooking the river have been erected since the opening of the Tay Bridge. There is an Established Church and a United Free Church. The population in 1901 was 876. In 1911 Wormit was erected into a quoad sacra parish.

Post, T., M. O. & T. E. D. Office, Newport; Alexander M. Anderson, postmaster. Letters should have Fifeshire added
Post, T., M. O. & Telephone Call Office, Wormit; Miss Elizabeth Dundas, subpostmistress. Letters through Dundee should be addressed Wormit, Fifeshire

PITTENWEEM is a sea port, a royal and police burgh, and a small parish on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, extending from east to west, and has a small harbour for vessels drawing under 12 feet, and a station on the Thornton Junction, Leven and East of Fife section of the North British railway, 5 miles south-west from Crail, 11 south-east from St. Andrews, 21 north-east from Kirkcaldy and 16 south-east from Cupar. It is governed by a provost, 2 bailies and 9 councillors. The parish is bounded north and east by the Anstruthers, south by the Firth and west by St. Monance. The burgh was originally attached to a priory, some remains of which stand on a hill above the harbour and adjoining the parish church; it was created a royal burgh in 1537 by James V. whose charter was confirmed by Charles I The town consists of three good streets, with a few bye thoroughfares, the houses generally bearing an ancient aspect. The Established church, situated near the ruins of the priory, is an ancient edifice with a turreted spire, and there is a United Free church and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1805, affords 168 sittings: the rectory, net value £176, has been held since 1919 by the Rev. Malcolm S. Farmer, who resides at Brownhills, St. Andrews. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, High street, and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, in James street. From the time of its being erected into a royal burgh until 1639, it appears that Pittenweem was a place of considerable note and trade; but from that period to the year 1645 it suffered severely, no fewer than thirteen sail of large vessels belonging to this port having been either taken by the enemy or wrecked. It is now a fishing station of some importance and fish curing is carried on rather extensively, and there is also a substantial trade in potatoes and barrel staves; there are two large coopers-ages and sail-making houses. The trustees of W. Douglas Irvine esq. Sir Ralph William Anstruther bart. D.L., J.P. and William James Baird esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 666 acres; rateable value, burghal, £6,444; area of burgh, 420 acres; the population in 1911 was, parish, 1,922; royal and parliamentary burgh, 1,888.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1921 was 910.

ST. ANDREWS

ST. ANDREWS is a seaport and ancient city, a royal burgh and a university, in the parishes of St. Andrew and St. Leonard, which extends 9 miles along the shore of its bay, and is from 1 to 3 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the south by the parishes of Dunino, Cameron, Ceres and Kemback, on the east by Kingsbarns and on the west by Leuchars. The town has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St Andrews section of the North British railway, which forms a junction at Leuchars with the line to the Tay bridge and the north, and is 39 miles north-east from Edinburgh, 10 east-by-north from Cupar and 10 north-west from Crail. St. Andrews was created a free (royal) burgh, by virtue of a charter conferred by David I. (1124-53), and confirmed by Malcolm IV. (1153-65); the charter of the latter, together with the silver keys of the city, and the axe used for the decapitation of Sir Robert Spottiswoode and some other royalists, in 1646, are still to be seen in the Town Hall. The city is governed by a provost, a dean of guild and two bailies, twelve councillors and a treasurer. It is lighted by gas by the St. Andrews Gas Co. Limited, and by electricity by the Electric Supply Corporation Limited. There are three principal streets: North street, which contains some fine buildings, including those of the United College of St. Salvator and St. Leonard; Market street, which runs through the middle of the town: and South street, a spacious thoroughfare lined with trees, extending from the old west port to the ruins of the ancient cathedral. From the tower of the church of St. Regulus, a structure of the early 12th century, 109 feet in height, a beautiful view is afforded of the Bell rock, the bay, the city and the surrounding country. The ruins of the once formidable castle, the frequent scene of Cardinal Beaton's cruelty to others, and of his own assassination, 29 May, 1546, lie towards the north-east and jut out into the sea. On the shore to the westward is a small eminence called the Witch Hill, where those convicted of witchcraft were tortured or put to death. Near this spot is a monumental obelisk, 30 feet in height, raised in 1842 to the memory of Patrick Hamilton, Henry Forrest, George Wishart and Walter Mill, Scottish reformers, burnt at St. Andrews 1528-1558. In Market street is a cattle trough, erected in 1878 to the memory of George John Whyte-Melville, of Mount Melville, near this city. The ruins of the Blackfriars Convent stand by the Madras college. St. Andrews at one time had an extensive foreign trade. The harbour is not large, and is very difficult of access, but is a safe anchorage, its most dangerous wind being from the north-east. The export traffic is chiefly in potatoes and grain, and the import in coals, paving stones &c. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, and the British Linen Bank. Golf, one of the national games of Scotland, has its stronghold in St. Andrews, the Royal and Ancient Golf Club having been established in 1754; the membership is restricted to 850; two great meetings are held annually in the spring and autumn; there are four 18-hole courses, known as the "Old course," the "New course," "Jubilee course" and "Eden course;" in addition to these are public, ladies' & children's putting greens. The principal hotels are the Grand, Rusack's Marine and the Golf, facing the sea, the Royal in South street, the Alexandra, and the Cross Keys, in Market street. The Memorial Cottage Hospital for medical and surgical cases, in Abbey Park, is supported by voluntary contributions: it contains 16 beds and two cots. The hospital in Argyle street, the gift of the late William Gibson, for aged and infirm persons belonging to the parishes of St. Andrew and St. Leonard only, was erected at a cost of £4,000, and opened in January, 1884. There are six public halls, viz.: the Town Hall, in South street; the City Hall, in Church square; the Good Templar Hall, North street; the Territorial Hall, in City road, the last-named and the Town Hall being large structures, suitable for entertainments and public meetings; the Boys' Brigade Hall, in Greenside place, and the Christian Institute Hall, in South street.

The legendary history of the see of St. Andrews ascribes its foundation to the translation hither of the relics of St. Andrew, by the hands of Regulus, a monk of Achaia, who, about A.D. 370, is said to have been miraculously guided to this spot, but its actual establishment is with much greater probability attributed to Acca, bishop of Hexham, A.D. 709-39, who settled here as a refugee from his own diocese, then ravaged by the Danes. The cathedral of St. Andrew, now a complete ruin, was connected with the ancient Culdean monastery once existing here, and with the later Augustinian priory, founded in the 12th century. It was begun in 1160, and consisted of a nave of twelve bays, transepts with eastern aisles, choir of six bays with aisles, eastern lady chapel and a central tower, 108 feet high; the total length of the church being 377 feet: the monastic building adjoined on the south side. Of the original Norman work there remains the east end of the lady chapel with its flanking turrets, the bases of some of the piers in the choir, the west and south walls of the south transept, and part of the south wall of the nave, the rest of which and what remains of the west front dating from the period 1271-9; beyond these portions scarcely anything now exists. Of the priory, nothing is left save the south wall of the chapter house, its vestibule, and some walling adjacent; the cloister garth was 132 feet square, with an alley on each side; the precincts were enclosed by the existing wall, built 1522-55, and continued along the south-east side of the town; this fine work, reared by Prior Hepburn, includes 14 round or square towers, each with an external niche, and once had a corbelled battlemented parapet. The destruction of the cathedral and the priory has been attributed to the fanatic violence of Knox and his adherents, but recent examinations of the site have suggested that its collapse was really due to the inherent weakness of its construction; in or about 1887 the plan of the cathedral was discovered by excavation, and is now marked out on the turf. The see of St. Andrews was raised to the dignity of an archbishopric in 1466, Patrick Graham, then bishop of Brechin, being appointed the first archbishop. After the Revolution of 1688 the see was abolished, but was revived in 1844, in place of the intermediate see of Fife, which existed from 1726 to 1844, and it now includes also Dunkeld and Dunblane.

The parish church of the Holy Trinity, in South street, was built in the year 1412, and in 1800 alterations were carried out which involved the destruction of the greater part of the mediæval building; in June, 1907, a complete restoration was begun, and the church was rededicated on St. Andrew's Day, 1909. The church is about 161 feet long by 54 feet across the nave: there are also transepts and a chapel. The whole of the woodwork is of oak. The pulpit, of Iona marble, alabaster and onyx, is a public memorial of the brilliant essayist and preacher "A. K. H. B.," formerly minister of the parish. The church contains a fine monument to Archbishop Sharp, erected by his son; it is of white marble, and includes a kneeling figure of the prelate, and below, in relief, is a carved representation of his assassination by the Covenanting faction, 3 May, 1679. There is also the parish church of St. Leonard, a chapel of ease to Holy Trinity, two United Free churches, Baptist and Congregational chapels and a Roman Catholic church and a Scottish Coast Mission station. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1869, will seat 655 persons; the incumbency, net value £428, has been held since 1916 by the Rev. George Nowell Price M.A. of Pembroke College, Cambridge. Attached are All Saints', in Castle street, and the Mission chapel, at Guard Bridge.

The Market is held on Monday, and the fairs (for hiring) on the second Tuesday in August and the first Monday after the 10th of November. Mount Melville is the residence of James Younger esq. J.P. The principal landowners are the trustees of St. Andrews University and Madras College, James Younger esq. J.P. James Cheape esq. D.L. Col. C. V. A. Turnbull, Col. C. St. Clair, Major H. A. Bethune J.P. Dr. J. Watson Wemyss and Alexander L. Meldrum. The area of the parish comprises 12,570 acres: value of landward, £19,570; area of burgh, 851 acres; value, £74,670; the population of the civil parish of St. Andrews and St. Leonards in 1911 was 9,701, and out of these the royal and parliamentary burgh contained 7,581. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was, St. Andrews, 7,552 and St. Leonards, 898; Boarhills, 292. The population of the municipal wards in 1911 was: first, 2,682; second, 2,655; third, 2,514; total, 7,851.

Denhead, a small village, is partly in this parish and partly in that of Cameron; for names, see Cameron. Boarhills and Guard Bridge are also small villages, distant about 4 miles from, and partly in the parish of, St. Andrews.

UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS.

This University, the oldest in Scotland, was first founded in 1410 by Bishop Wardlaw, and in 1411 obtained a charter and endowments, soon after which Benedict XIII. issued a papal bull in its favour.

The original colleges were St. Salvator's, founded in 1450; St. Leonard's, founded in 1512 and St. Mary's in 1537; of these, St. Salvator's and St. Leonard's were united into one college in 1747, by Act of Parliament, and in 1897, University College, Dundee, which had been founded in 1880, was incorporated in St. Andrews University.

The United college occupies comparatively new buildings, and has a principal, with professors of Greek, logic, natural philosophy, moral philosophy, humanity, mathematics, natural history, chemistry, anatomy, physiology, English literature, and education, besides lectures in other subjects, giving courses of instruction, qualifying for graduation. The college of St. Mary consists of a principal and professors of divinity, biblical criticism, church history and Oriental languages.

The buildings of University college are in Dundee, there, besides the teaching from chairs and lectureships in arts and science, are given courses of medical teaching, qualifying for the medical degrees of M.B., Ch.B. Students of medicine may take a complete qualifying course either solely in Dundee or partly in St. Andrews and partly in Dundee.

The University Library, which contains 160,000 volumes, was founded in 1612, and occupies a building sometime used for the sittings of the Scottish Parliament; of the old buildings of St. Salvator only the chapel and steeple remain, and of St. Leonard's only the ruins of the chapel. The insignia of the University comprises three maces of unusual design and of high antiquity and interest: the earliest of these, the mace of the Faculty of Arts, dates from 1418, and is of silver parcel gilt, and 4ft. 2½in. long; the staff is quite plain and divided into three portions by rounded knops, and a foot knop, spreading out into a wider base, and all ornamented with spiral bands; from a foliaged knop springs a hexagonal coved platform or corbel supporting the head, which is of the same form and consists of tabernacle work in three stages: the lowermost displays, within ogee crocketed arches divided by pinnacles, figures of angels, holding respectively the shields of arms of (1) Scotland; (2) Abp. Spotswood; (3) Bp. Wardlaw; (4) Earl of Mar; (5) Earl of Douglas; (6) Duke of Albany; the second stage, diminishing in size, is similar, but the niches contain figures of saints, viz., St. Michael, St. John the Baptist, the Virgin and Child, St. Andrew, St. Leonard, and a female figure, trampling under foot a dragon; in the upper and smallest stage the sides have open tracery and triangular crocketed heads. The mace of the Faculty of Canon Law (now the Theological Faculty) dating from a period antecedent to 1457, is also parcel gilt and 4ft. 1¾in. long: it is similar in design, but the knops of the shaft are more elaborate, and each stage of the head is finished with a cresting; in the lower stage the figures of the angels remain, but the shields they bore are all lost: the middle stage exhibits figures in flat chasing of (1) The Trinity; (2) The Virgin and Child; (3) The Good Shepherd; (4) St. Mungo; (5) St. Andrew; (6) St. Peter: the upper stage displays open tracery of varied design. The mace of the college of St. Salvator, made in Paris in 1461 by Jean Mayelle, goldsmith, and presented to the college by James Kennedy, bishop of St. Andrews, 1440-65, and founder of the college, is of silver gilt, and 3ft. 9¾in. long: it is by far the most artistic and remarkable of the three, and in point of design is probably unique: the shaft, divided into four portions by curious knops, is chased for its whole length with spiral bands, bearing the initials ℑ ℟ united by a tasselled cord and surmounted by a coronet, alternating with columbine flowers; the knops are hexagonal, that nearest the top displaying elaborate tabernacle work with crocketed canopies and niches: on the three principal sides are small pulpit-like projections, in which are figures of angels holding talents: the remaining sides have smaller canopied niches containing figures of monks reading: the central knop is similar, but less elaborate, and has no figures: the lower knop is still plainer, and has in a recess the figure of a man preaching, and in embattled projections above, three figures kneeling, with their faces towards the staff, which terminates below in an elegant expanding foliaged ornament, on which are figures of four lions passant, with their heads downwards: the head of the mace is an elaborately designed open shrine, resting on a base adorned with couchant lions and moulded pendants: within the shrine is an image of the Saviour with hands upraised, and on either side are open projections, terminating outwards in crenellated turrets, and enshrining figures of kneeling angels holding symbols of the Passion: below, on three sides, are figures of a king, a bishop and a mendicant: the other three sides have recesses containing grotesque figures holding shields, with the arms of the see, Bishop Kennedy, and one with an orb: the summit of the head consists of highly enriched double canopies, with crocketing and finials: the whole design is manifestly symbolical.

MADRAS COLLEGE.

Madras College is on the south side of South street, immediately behind and comprehending within it part of the ruins of the Black Friars monastery. The College was endowed by the late Dr. Bell, the distinguished founder of several similar establishments, both in this and in other towns in Scotland. The foundation stone was laid on the 9th April, 1832. Under the plan formulated by the Endowed Schools Commissioners for Scotland, this institution is now converted into a school for secondary education.

The St. Andrews School for Girls Co. Limited has two important schools here for senior and junior pupils respectively. President of the Company, the Dowager Countess of Airlie. Chairman of the Council, James Cunningham M.A., LL.D

St. Leonard's School is intended to provide for girls an education equal to that given to boys at the great public schools. It has ten houses for boarders, each holding from 26 to 47 girls. There are also some 20 day scholars. Attached are grounds of 16 acres, including a cricket field, lawn and gravel tennis courts, hockey courts, fives courts, open and covered gardens; instruction is also given, by arrangement, in riding and driving. There is a hospice for non-infectious, and a sanatorium for infectious illnesses. The council give three scholarships, each of the value of £20 per annum, to girls who have been not less than two years in the school, and these are tenable during good conduct and progress.

The Council also offer three entrance scholarships of the annual value of £80, £70 & £60 respectively, tenable for four years and awarded at an annual examination in July.

Annually, in October, the Council give a scholarship of £40 a year, tenable for three years at any college selected by the scholar and approved by the council. Triennially, in October, Miss Dove's Classical Scholarship of £20 a year, with £15 added by the council, and tenable for three years at Girton College, Cambridge, is awarded.

There is also the "Katharine Smith" scholarship, founded by Mrs. Theophilus Smith, of the annual value of £30, and tenable for four years at St. Andrews University.

The Lumsden-St. Leonard's scholarship of £30 a year for four years, is tenable at University Hall, St. Andrews, by a girl from St. Leonard's school, who proposes to read for honours in classics or history.

The Phyllis Hutchinson scholarship of not more than £100 for three years, founded in memory of a former pupil of the school, is tenable at any of the Women's Colleges at Cambridge or Oxford, by a girl of British parentage, who is a Protestant and has been educated at St. Leonard's school for not less than three years.

The Gwendolen Crewdson Memorial scholarship of £30-£40 will be awarded for the first time in September, 1920. Preference will be given to a candidate for admission to Girton College, Cambridge, but, failing such a candidate, it is available for any residential women's college, or for a school of medicine.

The Phyllis Guillemard scholarship of £30-£40 will be awarded for the first time in September, 1920. It is awarded for three years, or a longer period, and preference will be given to a candidate preparing for the practice of medicine.

Head Mistress, Miss Bentinck Smith M.A., D.Litt., J.P.

ST. MONANCE (or Abercrombie) is a parish and a burgh of barony, 2 miles west of Pittenweem, 10 south of St. Andrews and 14 south-east from Cupar, having a small harbour on the Firth of Forth and a station on the Thornton junction, Leven and East of Fife line, of the North British railway. The parish extends 2½ miles from north to south by 1½ in breadth; it is in the debt court district of Cupar, and is bounded north and north-east by Carnbee, east by Pittenweem and west by Kilconquhar. The burgh is governed by three bailies, a treasurer and twelve councillors. The principal employment of the inhabitants is fishing. The parish church stands on a hill above the village, and dates back to the 13th century: there are also a United Free church and a Congregational chapel. Newark Castle, the ruins of which stand on an eminence near the church, was at one time the seat of David Leslie, 5th son of the Hon. Sir Patrick Leslie, kt. of Pitcairlie, and commendator of Lindores; having served under Gustavus Adolphus, he was appointed a major-general in the Scottish forces, under the Earl of Leven, sent in 1644 to help the English Parliamentarians during the Civil war; in 1650, on the invasion of Scotland by Cromwell, Leslie hemmed him in at Dunbar, and, but for the interference of the clerical party, would have been the victor; he subsequently fought at Worcester, and at the Restoration was created Baron Newark, a title which became extinct on the death of the 2nd baron, 15 May, 1694. Up to 1646 this parish was known as Abercrombie or Invery, but has since been called by the name of its kirk. Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. and William James Baird esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 1,205 acres; rateable value, £6,841; the population of the parish in 1911 was 2,020.

STRATHMIGLO is a parish in the north-western portion of the county, 2 miles south-west of Auchtermuchty, 3 north-west from Falkland and 8 north-west from Kinross, with a station on the Fife and Kinross branch of the North British railway. The parish extends 4 miles from north to south by 4 in breadth, and is bounded on the north by parts of Abernethy and Arngask, west and south-west by Kinross-shire, south-east by Falkland and north-east by Auchtermuchty; it is in the small debt court district of Auchtermuchty. The burgh consists of two portions, Cashfeus and Strathmiglo, and has two principal streets, with several diverging lanes. There are Established and United Free churches. The Town house, which stands near the centre of the principal street, has a square tower, with a balustraded parapet, the whole being surmounted by a spire nearly 80 feet high. On the front of the tower is a stone sun-dial, now much defaced; and above this are the arms of the house of Burleigh. By a charter granted in 1600 the detached portions of Feus were erected into a burgh of barony, and this grant was confirmed by James VI. in 1605, but the nomination of bailies and admittance of burgesses was vested in the person of the superior. On the opposite side of the Miglo is the village of the Feus of Cash, and between the old town and this village is a level meadow called Town green, intersected by the Miglo and belonging to the burgh. The principal trade is the manufacture of linen, and there is also a large bleach works. A fair is held at Strathmiglo on the last Friday in June. Pitlour House is the residence of Major P. G. Moncrieff Skene J.P. Brig.-Gen. George Ronald Hamilton Cheape C.M.G., D.S.O., M.C. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 9,162 acres; rateable value, £13,860, including railway valuation; population in 1911 1,726 in the civil parish and 1,707 in the ecclesiastical parish.

GATESIDE is a village in the parish of Strathmiglo, distant 2 miles west from the village, with a station on the Fife and Kinross section of the North British railway, and contains a United Free church and a school.

TAYPORT,

WITH THE PARISH OF FERRY-PORT-ON-CRAIG.

TAYPORT, known originally as South Ferry, then successively Ferry of Scotscraig and Ferry-port-on-Craig (a name now confined to the parish in which the town is situated), is a seaport town and police burgh and was made such in the year 1887, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Many houses and villas have been erected on the slopes of the Tay, commanding a fine prospect of the opposite shore; it has become to some extent a residential suburb of Dundee, and is situated on the Firth of Tay, opposite to Broughty Ferry, at about a mile distance by water, 11 miles north-by-east from Cupar, and 5 south-east from Dundee; it has a station on the St. Andrews, Leuchars and Tayport section of the North British railway, and is connected by a branch with the Tay bridge. For facilitating the shipping of goods, the railway company have constructed a dock and a pier, which can be approached by steamers at certain times of the tides. There are two factories here for the spinning of yarns and the manufacture of linen and jute goods, also a foundry, engine works, and an extensive timber yard and works, which provide employment for many of the inhabitants. The North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited has a branch here. Mussel dredging is carried on extensively in the season. Tayport, with the parish, was originally an estate of the bishops of St. Andrews, and having in the reign of Alexander III. been feued to Sir Michael Scott, better known as "the Wizard," acquired the name of Scotscraig. The parish church was built in 1794, rebuilt in 1825, and renovated in 1882; there are also two United Free churches, an Episcopal Mission church and a Baptist meeting room.

FERRY-PORT-ON-CRAIG as a parish is from 4 to 5 miles in length and from half a mile to a mile in breadth, stretching along the south margin of the Tay to its mouth, where it empties itself into the North Sea. It was erected into a separate parish in 1606, having up to that time formed part of Leuchars; part of Tentsmuir forms the eastern portion of it, but this district is now a desolate sandy waste. The land rises to a hilly range extending westwards, and is bounded on the south by the parishes of Forgan and Leuchars, and on the north by the river Tay. The estate of Scotscraig, which comprises the whole parish, formerly the property of Archbishop Sharpe, of St. Andrews, of whose house some remains can still be traced, has been acquired by Dundee Corporation. The area of the parish comprises 2,804 acres; assessable value, £17,243; area of burgh, 392 acres; rateable value, £13,775. The population of the parish in 1911 was 3,400, including 3,272 in the burgh.

THORNTON, see MARKINCH.

TORRYBURN is a parish and village, the latter 5 miles south-west of Dunfermline, and 17 south-west from Kirkcaldy. The parish, formed by the union of the baronies of Torry and Crombie, extends for 4 miles along the Firth of Forth, and is about 1½ broad; it lies within the parliamentary division of West Fife, and in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, and is bounded north by Saline parish, west by Perthshire, and east by Inverkeithing and Dunfermline, and has a station on the Dunfermline, Kincardine and Alloa section of the North British railway. A new school was erected in 1913, which in addition to having a large central hall for drill purposes has also rooms for the teaching of cookery, laundry, woodwork and dress making. Owing to the increase of population the old school has been reopened, and the combined schools have been made a centre for the supplementary classes of five neighbouring schools; the pupils are conveyed by bus and train. There is also a Public Hall with a reading room and library attached. The inhabitants at one time were chiefly employed in weaving, but this branch of industry has become extinct. From the rocky state of the shore it has been found impossible to form a harbour here; but there is a pier at Crombie point, where steamers can land goods and passengers. The collieries of the Coltness Iron Co. Limited, situated at East Grange, and of the Fife Coal Co. Limited, find employment for most of the inhabitants. A fair is held at Torryburn on the second Wednesday in July. Within the boundary of the parish and adjacent to Torryburn village, is that of Low Torry. It is a very pretty village, having Torry Bay in front, with comparatively high back grounds protecting it from the north wind. Archibald Dominic Smith-Sligo esq. Miss Marindin, the trustees of the late R. George E. Wemyss esq. and John Allan Macnaughie-Welwood esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. A Naval Ordnance Depot has been opened in the parish, round which has sprung up the garden village of Crombie. The area of the parish comprises 3,410 acres; rateable value in 1920, £19,228. The population in 1911 was 1,497 in the civil and 1,301 in the ecclesiastical parish.

TULLIALLAN is a parish, formerly included as part of Perthshire, though locally situated in Fifeshire, to which county it was transferred by a Local Government Order dated 13 December, 1890, and confirmed 23rd February, 1891; it is in the poor combination of Stirling and small debt court district of Dunfermline and contains the town of Kincardine (or Kincardine-on-Forth), and extends about 5 miles from north-to-south by 2 in breadth. It is bounded on the north and east by the parishes of Saline and Culross, and south and west by the river Forth and part of Clackmannanshire. There is an Established church here; the old church, which remains standing in the burial ground, is a ruin, the steeple, however, being perfect. Tulliallan Castle (now (1921) unoccupied) is a modern mansion close to the ruins of the ancient castle. The lords of the manor are the trustees of the late Hon. Sir James Sivewright K.C.M.G. The Marquess of Lansdowne K.G., P.C. Lord Balfour of Burleigh and Mrs. Johnston of Sands, are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,685 acres; rateable value, £11,765; the population in 1901 was 1,862 and in 1911, 2,091. Letters received through Kincardine, Fifeshire.

WEMYSS,

WITH THE VILLAGES OF EAST AND WEST WEMYSS.

WEMYSS is a parish which comprises the villages of East and West Wemyss, the Coaltown of Wemyss, Kirkland and Methilhill and the Police Burgh of Buckhaven, Methil and Innerleven, in the Kirkcaldy district. West Wemyss is a burgh of barony, governed by two bailies, twelve councillors and a treasurer. The parish is bounded on the north by Kennoway and Markinch, on the south by the Firth of Forth, on the east by Scoonie, and on the west by Dysart; its length is 6 miles east to west, and a mile and a half in breadth. There are four stations in this parish on the branch of the North British railway, which runs from Thornton Junction to Methill, and the Anstruther and St. Andrews line skirts the northern border of the parish; the Wemyss tramways also run through the parish between Kirkcaldy and Leven. Coal is abundant, and is extensively wrought. A large portion of the Wemyss estate consists of coal seams of various depths, and a very large quantity of coal is yet unexcavated. In West Wemyss the coal trade has considerably increased, and several pits have been opened at Muiredge, besides one between the castle and East Wemyss. Within the parish is the ancient castle of Macduff, now a ruin. This massive structure crowns a height above the shore, to the east of East Wemyss, commanding a most extensive view seaward. Near Macduff's Castle are several extensive excavations at the base of the bank, which have evidently been formed by the action of the sea at a very remote period; one of these caves is called the "King's Cave," from the tradition that James V. once joined an encampment of gipsies here. The formation of the caves themselves is a result of the extraordinary force of the sea rolling in upon the new red sandstone rocks forming this part of the Fife coast from the North Sea. One of them, immediately under Macduff's Castle, is so narrow at the mouth that it is difficult to enter, but it expands so as easily to contain 100 persons. Another near is about fifty feet in height, with a roof formed like a cupola. A third, still larger, between East and West Wemyss, and termed the "Glass Cave," was used at the end of the 18th century for the manufacture of glass from kelp formed from the seaweed. The land generally is in an excellent state of cultivation. This place gives the title of earl to the Wemyss-Charteris-Douglas family, also Earls of March (1697), Barons Elcho, and Wemyss, of Elcho, 1628, in the peerage of Scotland, and Baron Wemyss, of the United Kingdom, 1821. There are United Free and Established churches in the village. The trustees of the late Randolph Gordon Erskine Wemyss esq. (d. 1908) are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 4,814 acres; rateable value, landward, £80,072; burghal (Buckhaven and Methil), £55,144. The population in 1901 was 15,031 and in 1911, 23,104: Buckhaven, Methil and Innerleven police burgh, 15,149 (including 336 shipping), and landward, 7,955. Population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911: Wemyss, 8,920; West Wemyss, 2,662.

EAST WEMYSS is an important village in the parish of Wemyss, one mile north-east from West Wemyss, 5 north-east from Kirkcaldy, and 3 north-east from Dysart, situated on the Firth of Forth. There are Established and United Free churches. In this village there are a colliery, a linen manufactory and a brewery.

WEST WEMYSS is a village and quoad sacra parish, a mile west from East Wemyss, 4 north-east from Kirkcaldy, 5 south-west from Leven, and 2 north-east from Dysart; it is in the parish of Wemyss. The harbour is situated at its western extremity, and has several vessels belonging to it employed in the exportation of coal, which is wrought close to the harbour. A short distance east of the village, on the brink or face of an eminence, and surrounded on the land side by beautiful plantations and pleasure grounds, is Wemyss Castle, the residence of Capt. Michael John Erskine-Wemyss. The Established church is the only place of worship. There is also a school here. Population in 1911, 2,662.

COALTOWN OF WEMYSS and KIRKLAND are villages in the parish.

FORFARSHIRE,

maritime county on the east coast, is bounded on the north nd north-west by Aberdeenshire, on the west and south-west y Perthshire, on the south, south-east and east by the Firth f Tay and North Sea, and on the north-east by Kincardine-hire; its extent from north to south is about 38 miles, and om east to west 36, with 45 miles of coast line. The figure f this county is, perhaps, the most uniform of any in Scot-nd. The area is 8,737 square miles or 559,037 acres of land; f these there are about 300,000 cultivated and 260,000 un-ultivated, and 3,294 of water; the portion occupied by the kes is inconsiderable. In size Forfarshire is classed as the leventh, and in population as the fourth of the Scottish ounties. The population in 1901 was 284,082, and in 1911, ounty 116,413, Dundee city 165,004, total 281,417, viz.:— ales, county 53,397, Dundee city 73,241, total 126,638; emales, county 63,016, Dundee city 91,763, total 154,779. n 1901 the inhabited houses were 65,205; uninhabited, 4,905, nd building, 491. In 1911 the inhabited houses were:— ounty 28,425, Dundee city 38,637, total 67,062; uninhabited, ounty 2,583, Dundee city 2,432, total 5,015; building, county 0, Dundee city 92, total 152.

Early History.—The district of Angus (now Forfarshire), ith the contiguous county of Kincardine on the north, nciently formed the country of the "Horesti," and a portion f the Pictish kingdom. On the dissolution of that govern-ent by Kenneth II. about the end of the 9th century, he is aid to have divided it between his two brothers, Angus and earns, from whom the two counties derived their appellation. The district gave the title of earl to two different families; n the extinction of the first, the earldom was conferred on a elation of King David Bruce, and in 1477 it merged in the amily of the Douglasses; it has since devolved on the Duke f Hamilton. There are a number of old ruinous castles in his county, most of which have fallen to decay in consequence f the baronies on which they stand having passed into the ands of the proprietors of other estates. There are also emains of forts, the principal ones being at Castle-Finhaven, Dundee, Law, Monifieth, Dumbarrow and Caerbuddo.

Soil, Surface and Produce.—The great level valley of Strath-more runs through the centre of the county from east to west, nd the lines of hills which flank this extensive and fine tract f country, with the Grampians on the north and some minor anges on the south, may be said to form this district into a eries of continuous ridges, generally pursuing a direction from est to east, interrupted occasionally by the different rivers nd streams coursing to the sea. The eminences of greatest ltitude in the shire are:—Hill of Dundee, 525 feet; Dunnichen ill, 720; Belmont, 759; Sidlaw, 1,406; Craigowl, 1,609; athlaw, one of the Grampians, 2,264, and Mount-Battock, 2,465 eet above the level of the sea. The portion of the Grampian ountains in this shire is diversified by many beautiful valleys, nd from the summit of these elevations to the ocean on the ast, and the Tay on the south, the surface of the land may e considered an inclined plane. From the aerial region of he highest Grampian an extensive and well varied prospect s presented, not only of almost the whole country adjoining he Tay and of the ocean, but of the eastern part of the eninsula of Fife, the coast of East Lothian and the heights of ammermoor. From the mouth of the Tay to near the West-aven the coast is sandy, having, from thence eastward, many unken rocks. Within a mile to the east of Arbroath the shore ecomes bold and rocky, presenting precipices to the sea, erforated with caverns by the incessant and insidious work-ngs of the waves; the "Redhead," a promontory upwards f 200 feet in height, is the most striking feature of this ocky front; it forms the southern point of Lunan Bay, nd exposes a beautiful beach to the ocean for nearly 3 niles. The capabilities of Forfarshire for agriculture continued or centuries in a dormant state, but it has now a practically nlightened system of farming. The farmers of this county ave kept at least equal pace in the improvements adopted with those of similarly situated divisions of the country. The general drainage of the land has been proceeded with to great and beneficial extent; and several lochs, particularly hat of Rescobie, have been drawn off for the purpose of btaining shell marl, which has long been in high repute with he agriculturists, and the introduction of bone manure has been followed by the most gratifying results. The sowing of permanent pasture grasses and turnips is persevered in, and the quantity of ground appropriated to tillage is annually increasing. Wheat and beans are also grown, but only in the more favoured localities.

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are oats, 57,241 acres; barley, including bere, 22,904; wheat, 8,995; rye, 1,511; total corn crops, 91,172 acres; turnips and swedes, 31,809; potatoes, 18,725; rape, 142; cabbage, 145; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 347; small fruit, 361; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 22,502 acres; pasture (not for hay), 58,172 acres. The total area of land (excluding water) is 559,037 acres, of which 179,613 are mountain and heath land used for grazing; 23,889 permanent grass; 223,643 arable land.

In traversing the lower parts of the shire, beautiful enclosures and plantations meet the eye, and excellent roads have been formed. The planting of waste lands seems to have made very little progress till about the middle of the last century; Scotch firs were the only sort of trees planted in such situations, but more recent planters introduced the larch as a valuable species of timber, and adapted, as they thought, to every variety of soil and situation; but experience has proved that by the operation of draining the moors and waste lands produce excellent oak and beech, of which a number of proprietors have planted extensively.

The polled black Angus cattle, now less common than at one time, have given place to other breeds, and many young and lean cattle are imported from Ireland. Numbers of black-faced sheep are reared on the hills. The live stock comprised in 1920, 7,448 horses, used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 19; unbroken horses, 1,336; other horses, 1,169; cows in milk, 9,573; in calf, but not in milk, 815; heifers in calf, 836; bulls, 448; other cattle, two years and above, 15,311; one year and under two, 10,949; under one year, 6,596; ewes kept for breeding, 58,407; rams, 2,292; other sheep, one year and above, 25,517; under one year, 61,825; sows kept for breeding, 870; other pigs, 5,284.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 371; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 473; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 207; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 187; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 235; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 178; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 261; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 446; above 300 acres, 179; total, 2,537.

The fisheries of Forfarshire are of great importance; those of the North and South Esk and the coast of the county are at the present time very valuable, and the mode of packing salmon in ice for the London market is a practice which has proved of peculiar advantage to those connected with that branch of the fishery. Haddock, cod, ling, soles, halibut, turbot &c. are also caught, and during July and August the fishermen are engaged in fishing for herring, of which large numbers are taken off the north-east coast. The fishing boats registered in the county, under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," on December 31st, 1918, at Arbroath, were, 87 boats, 951 tons; Dundee, 89 boats, 771 tons; Montrose, 156 boats, 1,672 tons.

The number of sailing and steam vessels registered Dec. 31st, 1918, under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act," at Dundee, was 47, of 21,091 tons, and at Montrose, 18, of 664 tonnage.

Manufactures and Minerals.—The manufactures of Forfar are of very high consequence; and as Fifeshire is celebrated for the production of the finer linen fabric, so is this county noted for the manufacture of the coarse hempen goods, wrought up from foreign materials; the spinning of yarn in large mills is carried on very extensively. Dundee, Arbroath and Montrose are its principal trading ports; the two first-named enjoy pre-eminence in the making of sailcloths, Osnaburgs, sacking, dowlases, and other linen textures; Brechin participates largely with other places in the preparation of flax; and the towns of Forfar, Montrose and Kirriemuir are seats of material manufacturing importance. Exclusive of these particular stations, the inhabitants of all the little towns and villages are industriously employed in weaving the already prepared materials into cloth, and in the process of bleaching. Besides the branches above mentioned, there are also many engineering works, breweries, tanneries, paper works, distilleries, and starch and tobacco manufactories. This county is not distinguished for its mineral treasures. The output from quarries worked, under the "Mines and Quarries General Report and Statistics" for 1919, was, clay, 5,010 tons; igneous rocks, 55,370 tons, and sandstone, 10,685 tons.

Rivers, Lochs and Railways.—The principal rivers are the North and South Esk, which rise near each other on the northern confines of the county, in the Braes of Angus; the first-named being formed by the Mark and the Lee (which latter river runs through Loch Lee), receiving the Tarf, West-water, Cruick and Luther, and debouching into the North Sea 3 miles north of Montrose. The South Esk rises on the north-west border, and, passing south-east nearly through the centre of the county, is fed by the Norah, Lemno, Carity and Prosen, and reaches the sea at Montrose; there is a third river of some size, the Isla, which rises near the west border, and flowing south-east receives the Dean, Carleet and Glamis, and turning west, near Alyth, joins the Tay at Kinclaven. There are also two lesser rivers, the Dighty and the Lunan. The former proceeds from some small lakes in the parish of Lundie, and falls into the mouth of the Tay, east from Broughty Ferry; the latter conveys the waters of the lochs of Rescobie and Belgavies to the sea at Lunan Bay. The Lunan is famous for its eels, and the other rivers abound with different varieties of the trout and salmon. The Tay skirts the southern portion, and is the great cause of the commercial prosperity of Dundee; it rises in the western part of Perthshire, a little east of Perth city it becomes an estuary or firth, and about 8 miles below Dundee it expands into the bay of St. Andrews, in which is placed the Bell Rock light. The lakes of most consequence are Loch Lee, in the parish of its name; Loch Brandy, in the parish of Clova; the Loch of Forfar, near that town, and the Loch of Lintrathen, in that parish; and of Belgavies, in the parish of Aberlemno. None of these are of great magnitude—indeed few, if any, are more than a mile in extent. The railways are confined to the southern and eastern portions of the county, where they connect the different towns with Aberdeen on the north and Edinburgh and Glasgow on the south. These lines are chiefly part of the Caledonian Railway system, the main line of which enters the county a little east of Cupar Angus, and at Alyth Junction, south of Ruthven, it sends a branch to the north-west to Alyth and one south-east-by-south to Dundee, the main line proceeding on to Forfar (from which place is a line to Kirriemuir), where also a line from Dundee, via Broughty Ferry, comes in on the south, thence to Guthrie, whence a branch goes south-east to Arbroath; the next junction is at Dubton, where the Montrose line joins, after which the Caledonian leaves the county near Craigo; the North British enters at Broughty Ferry, whence the line which belongs to the Caledonian from Dundee becomes joint property as far as Arbroath, and from thence the North British passes through Lunan Bay to Montrose, and on to Marykirk and Aberdeen.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Forfarshire comprises 53 civil parishes, and 68 complete and parts of 6 ecclesiastical parishes in the county and 20 in Dundee city. There are five royal and parliamentary burghs, namely, Dundee, Arbroath, Montrose, Brechin and Forfar. The county sends one member to Parliament. There are also three police burghs, Carnoustie, Kirriemuir and Monifieth. In 1913 Broughty Ferry police burgh was annexed to Dundee. Dundee, raised to the dignity of a city by royal charter, returns two members, and the county one; the county parliamentary constituency in 1919 was 24,224.

ABERLEMNO is a parish in the poor combination and small debt court district of Forfar, with a hamlet of the same name, 5 miles north-east from Forfar and 6 south-west from Brechin, the nearest railway station being at Aldbar, on the Caledonian railway, 3½ miles south, near the boundary of the parish. The parish is about 5 miles from north to south by 4 miles wide, and bounded on the north-east and east by the parish of Brechin, Guthrie on the south-east, Rescobie on the south-west, Oathlaw on the west, Tannadice on the north-west and Careston on the north. The river South Esk flows along the north boundary. The Established church here is a good building of stone, and there is also a United Free church. Turin Hill, the highest elevation in the parish, is 826 feet above sea level. In the parish churchyard is an inscribed monolith, and a little to the north of the parish church are three others. A little to the eastward of the church are the ruins of the Castle of Flemington, and about 2 miles north-east from the church are the ruins of Melgund Castle, supposed to have been erected by Cardinal Beaton. The "vitrified Fort of Finhaven" is about a mile west from the parish church. The Earl of Minto is the principal landowner. The area is 9,000 acres; rateable value, £9,536; population in 1911, 728.

AIRLIE (formerly Airly) is a parish with a kirktown, about 5 miles west from Kirriemuir, 10 miles north-west from Forfar and 5 miles north-east from Alyth, in the western part of the county, on the borders of Perthshire, and in the small debt court district of Kirriemuir; its length from north-east to south-by-west is about 6 miles, with a breadth varying from 4 to 5½ miles, and it is bounded on the north by Lintrathen and Kingoldrum, on the east by Kirriemuir and Glamis, on the south by Eassie and Meigle and on the west by Alyth and Ruthven; part of the line of boundary being formed by the river Isla and its tributaries, the Melgum and the Dean. The nearest railway stations are Eassie and Glamis, on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway; each about 4 miles south-west and south-east respectively from Airlie kirktown. Here are Established and United Free churches. Within the parish is situated Airlie Castle, the ancient seat of the Ogilvys, Earls of Airlie, much frequented in the summer months by visitors, the public being admitted on Tuesdays and Saturdays. Of the ancient structure only the front wall and entrance tower, the arch of which still retains its portcullis, have been preserved; these are incorporated in the modern mansion, now the residence of the Dowager Countess of Airlie. Lindertis is the property and summer residence of Sir Thomas Torquil Alphonso Munro bart. who is the principal landowner; the Earl of Airlie M.C. the Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne, Sir John Andrew Ogilvy-Wedderburn bart. J.P. Col. J. M. Clayhills Henderson and Ernest Cox esq. are also landowners. The area of the parish comprises 8,923 acres; rateable value, £8,220; population in 1911, 723.

ARBIRLOT is a parish and village, the former bounded on the east by the North Sea, north by Arbroath and St. Vigeans, west by Carmyllie and south by Panbride parishes; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath and extends 4 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth. The village has a station on the Dundee and Arbroath Joint railway (Carmyllie branch), and another station 2 miles east of the church, called Elliot Junction. The village, which is 3 miles west of Arbroath and 14 north-east from Dundee, is on the east bank of the Elliot burn, from which the old name of the parish (Aberelliot) was derived. There are Established and United Free churches. About a quarter of a mile south-east of the village stands Kelly Castle, which originally belonged to the family of Ouchterlony, and is now owned and occupied by Archibald Briggs esq. The surface of the land is flat and along the sea coast the soil is sandy; inland it is a rich loam, capable of producing various crops. The Earl of Dalhousie is the principal landowner. The area comprises 6,748 acres; rateable value, £10,115; the population in 1911 was 840.

ARBROATH,

WITH THE JOINT PARISH OF ST. VIGEANS AND VILLAGE OF MARYWELL.

ARBROATH is a royal burgh, a seaport and the seat of a presbytery, 60 miles north-north-east from Edinburgh, 110 north-east from Glasgow, 17 north-east from Dundee, 15 south-east from Forfar and 12 south from Montrose, situated on a small plain on the coast of the North Sea, and on both sides of the river Brothock where it flows into the sea. It has a station, which is a junction for the Dundee, Arbroath and Forfar Joint railway of the Caledonian and North British lines with the Arbroath and Montrose section of the North British railway. The railway station was reconstructed at a cost of about £50,000; the work was completed in 1911. The harbour is extensive, and has been greatly improved, at a cost of more than £20,000; steamers of a fairly large size frequent the port. In the coasting trade 208 sailing and steam vessels arrived at the port in 1913 with cargoes and in ballast, of 14,539 tons, and 218 departed, of 17,077 tonnage.

The number of fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port Dec. 31, 1913, was 90 of 1,140 tons, requiring 380 men and boys to work them.

At the commencement of the 18th century, Arbroath had but little trade, nothing being then directly imported except occasional cargoes of wood from Norway; flax, iron and other useful commodities being purchased from the merchants in Dundee and Montrose. About the year 1738, the manufacture of coarse linens was introduced, and the staple trade of Arbroath at the present day is the manufacture of sail cloth and other coarse linens; the preparation and spinning of the yarns of these productions of the loom is carried on extensively by many firms and individuals. Jute spinning has also been introduced, but is of small extent compared with flax spinning. In addition to the linen trade there are various concerns of magnitude, including engineering works, iron foundries, a tannery and boot and shoe manufactory, roperies &c. and a good trade exists in the exportation of grain and potatoes. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a bank for savings. This town was gifted to the abbey of Aberbrothock (founded in 1178 by William the Lion), and the abbey was erected into a burgh of regality and received a charter as a royal burgh in 1599.

The existing remains of the abbey comprise the south gable of the transept, the north-west tower, about 70 feet high, portions of the chapter house, and the west door and the gate house, with its crow-stepped gable; the style is Early English and Transitional, and has some remarkable arcading in the lower stories. In 1908 H.M. Board of Works commenced making extensive repairs to the abbey, the masonry was cleaned down, jointed with special cement and otherwise strengthened; the condition of the north tower having been found to be precarious, strong iron bands fastened with bolts were clasped round it; the south tower, being in a similar state of decay, has been dealt with in the same manner. In 1909 the towers on the south-western side of the gateway were thoroughly overhauled. The work of strengthening and repairing will be continued until the whole fabric has been put in a proper state of repair. A part of the abbot's lodgings is also extant. In this house King Robert the Bruce was frequently entertained by the abbot, who was also Chancellor of Scotland. The monks first came from Kelso, and Reginald (a monk of Tyron) was first abbot. The abbey was very extensively endowed with lands and other gifts by Kings William I., Alexander II. and Robert I. and their nobility. It possessed 46 parish churches, and extensive lands in several counties, particularly in the north of Scotland, with privileges of regality &c. The abbots of this foundation had privileges which others did not enjoy—they were exempt from assisting at the yearly synods, and had the distinction of making use of and wearing the pontifical ornaments. King John conferred on the inhabitants of the place the same privileges that his subjects enjoyed throughout all England, except in his city of London.

Arbroath is governed by a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer and 12 councillors. There is a guildry and a body of seven incorporated trades, but these are now virtually private bodies. This town unites with Montrose, Forfar, Brechin and Bervie in sending one member to the Imperial Parliament. Arbroath is the seat of a sheriff court for the district. The court sits weekly, on Wednesday, during session. Police courts are also held weekly, or oftener when necessary, and burgh and justice of peace courts are also held. The parish of Arbroath is now a joint parish with St. Vigeans for administrative purposes, by Order which took effect from the 15th July, 1895: they are in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. There are many well built streets, the principal business streets being High street, Keptie street and West port. The town has been greatly improved by paving and sewerage, and by the addition of elegantly fitted and well supplied shops, and possesses several good hotels, the principal being the White Hart. The Public Baths, in Market gate, were opened in 1915: the site was given by Alexander Balfour esq. of Inchock, and the baths were built by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. at a cost of about £7,000. The Victoria Park, adjoining the cliffs on the north-east side of the town, was opened in 1897 in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. The Town House was built in 1812, and in rear of it are commodious market buildings, erected about 1855 by the magistrates and town council, at an outlay of about £7,000. A large public hall, with subsidiary rooms, in High street, was built in 1866 by an incorporated company. The poorhouse, situated in an elevated and healthy suburb of the town, was erected in 1866. A Free Public Library was opened June 4th, 1898, in the building formerly the High School, purchased by the late David Corsar esq. and by him presented to the town, the late Andrew Carnegie esq. contributing £1,000 towards the library. The market is held on Saturday, and the fairs on the last Saturday in January for general business and hiring servants; on the 28th May, or first Saturday thereafter, for hiring; July 18th (if it fall on a Saturday, if not, on the following Saturday) for general business and hiring; and 28th November, or first Saturday thereafter, for hiring. Two newspapers are published in the town, the "Arbroath Guide" (every Saturday) and the "Arbroath Herald" (every Friday).

Arbroath is the seat of a presbytery (No. 52), which meets on first Tuesday of February, April, May, July, September and December: it has, with the joint parish of St. Vigeans, six Established places of worship, nine United Free churches, and also Baptist, Congregational, Wesleyan Methodist, Original Secession, Roman Catholic and Catholic Apostolic chapels. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, built in 1855, will seat 568 persons. The Rev. Edward William Millar B.A. of Christ Church College, Oxford, has been rector since 1912. The parish church (with the exception of the steeple) was totally destroyed by fire in November, 1892, but was rebuilt in 1895, at a cost of £10,000, in the Early Pointed style, from designs by John James Burnet esq. A.R.S.A. of Glasgow; the former steeple, built in 1832, and 150 feet in height, remains: the east window is a memorial to John Macdonald esq. town clerk, and his wife; the carved oak pulpit was presented by the Young Men's Guild. The High school, in Keptie road, at the west end of the town, on seven acres of ground, feued from the Hospitalfield Trustees, was erected in 1895 at a cost of £12,000, and is in the Elizabethan style, from plans by Messrs. Carver and Symon, Arbroath, and includes a large mechanical workshop. Annual grants are received from the Scottish Education Department, the Morgan Trust and the Arbroath Educational Trust. Bursaries for pupils are supplied by the Morgan Trust, the Forfarshire Education Authority and the Arbroath Educational Trust. The school is in charge of a rector and a large staff of teachers, and is under the management of the Forfarshire Education Authority. The Arbroath Burgh and District Epidemic Hospital for Infectious Diseases, on the Forfar road, was begun in 1901, at an estimated cost of £10,000, from designs by Mr. Hugh Gavin, architect, of Arbroath, and opened in 1904; it contains 45 beds, and is under the joint governorship of the Arbroath Town Council and the Arbroath District members of the County Council. A new Infirmary was commenced in 1913, and was opened in April, 1916, at an estimated cost of £14,000.

The local charities of the town include the Infirmary and Dispensary at High Common, and Epidemic Hospitals near; two destitute sick societies; and a number of mortifications, viz.: Carmichael's, founded in 1738, for seven widows of ship masters; Colvill's, founded in 1812, providing £60 annually for the education of ten poor children; £10 for Scotch Episcopal clergymen; £10 for the poor of Arbroath; the like sum to the poor of St. Vigeans, and the residue to 20 poor householders; Mrs. Renny Strachan's, of £50, yearly, for providing coals and oatmeal for distribution at Christmas amongst the most necessitous poor; Forbes's Fund, founded in 1864, from which sums of not less than £8 nor more than £10 yearly are given for the relief of destitute widows and old unmarried females in the town of Arbroath; the Gibson Fund, founded in 1868, and consisting of the annual produce of the residue of the trust estate of William Gibson, and applied as follows:—£100 was formerly paid annually to the rector of the High school for the education of eight boys, but this is now altered under the constitution of the Arbroath Educational Trust; the residue to be divided yearly in sums of not less than £20 and not more than £25 among poor householders of the town of Arbroath, preference being given to respectable worthy people of fallen fortunes; the Gibson Christmas Charity, founded in 1868, and being the annual revenue of a sum of £2,000, is applied in the purchase of coals, groceries, oatmeal and clothes for distribution among the necessitous poor of the town; the Gibson Mortification, founded in 1868, and consisting of the annual revenue of a sum of £4,000, divided yearly among 16 poor householders; the Petrie Gift, a fund supposed to amount to about £2,000, bequeathed in 1875, by Mr. William Petrie, manufacturer, to be distributed in £10 shares among "poor deserving women of respectable character, being in and belonging to, and at the time resident in the parish of St. Vigeans, and who have not been in receipt of parochial relief for the preceding five years at least;" the Duncan Charity, founded in 1869, and consisting of the annual profits of three-eighths of the residue of the estates of the late David Duncan, for the behoof of poor, aged and reduced persons, not being objects of parochial relief; the Arbikie Fund, bequeathed by John Mudie, of Pitmuies, being the personal estate of his sister, the late Miss Catherine Mudie, of Arbikie, to which he had succeeded, the free revenue being divided into annuities of £40 each, among deserving persons residing in the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans; Arrott's Mortification, bequeathed by the late Dr. James Arrott, of Dundee, and being a capital sum amounting to about £6,000, the free revenue of which is annually distributed in annuities of about £6 each. The George Anderson Fund was created by the late George Anderson, of Denfield, who bequeathed the residue of his estate, about £20,000, the income to be applied in assisting working men and women connected with Arbroath who have worked there for not less than 10 years, and who, through no fault of their own, are unable to maintain themselves; the scheme of administration provides that the benefits of the fund shall consist of (a) payments at the rate not exceeding 10s. a week, in each case to be made in advance, monthly or otherwise as the trust shall provide; (b) special grants to meet temporary need arising out of exceptional circumstances.

The land in the neighbourhood of Arbroath slopes gradually upwards from the shore; the surrounding country is agricultural and for the most part very fertile, the soil, though varied, being excellently adapted for all the different grain and green crops usually grown in Scotland. About a mile north-east the coast becomes very bold, rocky and perpendicular, and contains a number of caves and arches perforated by the action of the waves; these are a great attraction to visitors, having been rendered famous by Sir Walter Scott in his "Antiquary." Near the harbour at Lady Loan is a signal tower for communication with the Bell (or Inchcape) Rock, which rises from the North Sea, about 12 miles in a south-easterly direction from Arbroath. On "the rock" is a lighthouse, the first stone of which was laid in July, 1808, and the light was first shown 1st Feb. 1811: at the lighthouse there are a principal lightkeeper and three assistants: at the signal tower, on shore, each keeper has apartments for his family; the tower is about 80 feet in height and is furnished with an excellent telescope. Signals are exchanged with the persons at the lighthouse on the rock by the lightkeeper on shore daily at nine in the morning, weather permitting; communication is by steamer from Granton. The traditionary story connected with the Inchcape Rock is well known through Southey's popular ballad. Hospitalfield, the mansion of the late Patrick Allan Fraser esq. H.R.S.A. is now a school of art, and has for its object the art education of a limited number of young men who have insufficient means of their own, and who intend to make art a profession. Students who show sufficient promise are permitted to study at the college without payment for tuition, and receive board or lodging for a period not exceeding four years from the date of their admission: the building contains many art treasures, and is open to the public once a week during the months of July and August; it was the Monkbarns of the "Antiquary." The trustees of the late Patrick Allan Fraser esq. of Hospitalfield, and the representatives of George Anderson esq. of Denfield, are the principal landowners of Arbroath parish; and Mrs. Fletcher, of Letham Grange, St. Vigeans; Lord Lyell of Kinnordy, the Earl of Northesk, William Greig esq. of Seaton, A. R. Duncan esq. of Parkhill, F. F. Macdonald esq. of Lochlands, Frank Batchelor, of North Tarrie, and Sir Herbert Kinnaird Ogilvy bart. of Inverquharity and Baldovan, are those of St. Vigeans. The area of the burgh is 1,090 acres; rateable value, £116,309; population in 1901, 22,518, and in 1911, 20,647 in the royal and municipal burgh; the population of the wards (exclusive of shipping) in 1911 was: First (including 3 on Bell Rock Island), 6,605; Second, 6,240; Third, 7,789. The area of the united parish of Arbroath and St. Vigeans, including the burgh, is 12,763 acres; the rateable value, £20,203; railways, £2,647; with a population in 1911 of 22,730. Included in the total population were 62 inmates and 6 officials in Arbroath and St. Vigeans Poorhouse, 32 in the Industrial School and 52 in the Infirmary.

The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 20,651; the number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1915 was 3,334.

St. Vigeans is 8 miles from east to west by 4 in depth, lying north of Arbroath, with which, by an Order dated 28 May, 1895, it is incorporated for administrative purposes, and contains the villages of St. Vigeans, Auchmithie and Marywell and half the town of Arbroath; it is bounded on the north and north-east by the parish of Inverkeilor and south-west by Carmyllie, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. The Arbroath railway station is in this parish. The Established church here dates from the 12th century. The name by which this place is now known is that of a famous hermit who had his chapel and hermitage at the Grange of Conan, near to which was a baronial castle, named Gory, or Gregory. From Whiting Ness, and as far as Auchmithie, the coast is very rugged and precipitous (gradually rising to Dickmontlaw Hill, 250 feet above the sea level) and contains a number of caves and arched rocks, some of which may be passed through in boats and others on foot; these form a great attraction, and are much visited. The stream of the Brothock flows through St. Vigeans and passes through the town of Arbroath, entering the sea at its harbour. The population in 1911 of the ecclesiastical parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans was 4,521. The following quoad sacra parishes have been formed out of the parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans: Abbey, population 4,900; Inverbrothock, 4,995; Ladyloan, 3,493; St. Margarets, 2,960 and St. Vigeans, 1,157. Letham Grange, in the parish of St. Vigeans, the residence of Mrs. Fletcher, is a large mansion in the Grecian style, situated about 3 miles north from Arbroath.

AUCHMITHIE, a quoad sacra parish formed from the civil parishes of Arbroath and St. Vigeans and a village, is situated on the shore of a small harbour for fishing boats, on the east coast, about 3½ miles north from Arbroath, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Arbroath. The harbour, towards the construction of which the Fishery Board of Edinburgh made a grant of £3,900, cost in all £5,200. The coast here consists of bold rocky cliffs. Arbroath and Letham Grange, on the North British coast line from Arbroath to Montrose, are the nearest railway stations, and are distant 3 miles south and west respectively. A public hall was erected in 1888, and is used for entertainments and meetings. George Grant esq. is lord of the manor and a landowner. The population in 1911 was 364.

AUCHTERHOUSE is a parish in the south of the county, to the south of the Sidlaw Hills, its kirk town being 7 miles north-west of Dundee; it is bounded on the north by Glamis, east and south-east by Tealing, Strathmartine and Liff, and west and south-west by Newtyle and Lundie; it is in the Dundee small debt court district, and has a station 1 mile west from the village on the Dundee and Newtyle branch of the Caledonian railway; there is also another station at Dronley, on the same branch. The Dronley burn and the road from Dundee to Meigle pass through the parish. There is an Established church, built in 1775. The Sidlaw Sanatorium, at Auchterhouse, a hospital for consumption, was opened by the Countess of Airlie in 1902, and is now under the direction of the Dundee Royal Infirmary. The soil is chiefly black land and the country hilly. The Earl of Airlie M.C. Countess of Buckinghamshire, Joseph Murray esq. Messrs. F. M. and G. Batchelor, Robert L. P. Duncan esq. Mrs. Mary M. Fairweather, Mrs. Helen Colville and W. Ashby Mitchell esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,185 acres; rateable value, £9,918; population in 1911, 629 civil and 615 ecclesiastical.

BARNHILL, see BROUGHTY-FERRY.

BARRY is a parish and village, the former extending about 4 miles from north to south by 3½ from east to west, and situated in the south-east angle of the county, and at the mouth of the Tay, which bounds it on the south, the eastern boundaries being the North Sea and Lochty Burn, and the Western Buddon Burn; it is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and contains the village and kirktown of Barry and two-thirds of the burgh of Carnoustie, at which town and at Barry are stations on the Dundee and Arbroath Joint railway. The village is 9 miles north-east from Dundee and 8 south-west from Arbroath, and contains an Established church, a United Free church and a school. The soil is sandy and the country undulating. The Earl of Dalhousie, Robert Bowie esq. and the trustees of Mrs. Lingard Guthrie are the principal landowners. The extensive links in this parish were acquired by the government in 1892, at a cost of £48,000, as a training ground for military purposes; its artillery range is one of the best land ranges in Britain, and the ground is otherwise very suitable for manœuvres, rifle practice and encamping, it being easy of access by rail. A Soldiers' Home has now been erected for the benefit of the men while in camp. At Buddonness, on the southern extremity of the parish, are two lighthouses, and close by is a lightship to guide vessels on their entrance into the Tay, the entrance being narrow, and sandbanks numerous and dangerous. The area of the parish comprises 5,286 acres; rateable value of the landward portion, £8,040; burgh, £26,918; the population in 1911 was 4,933, including 4,307 in the burgh of Carnoustie. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,531.

BRECHIN

BRECHIN is a royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery and of a bishopric, and the head of a poor combination and small debt court district, 11 miles north-east from Forfar and 70 north-by-east from Edinburgh, situated on the north bank of the South Esk, with a terminal station on a branch line from Bridge of Dun, of the north-eastern section of the Caledonian railway. Brechin more than once suffered by the incursions of invaders and the broils of civil wars; it was burnt by the Danes in 1012, and in 1645 was subjected to a similar calamity by the Marquis of Montrose; two years afterwards it was nearly depopulated by that dreadful scourge, the plague. Formerly the city was walled, but the walls and gates have been long removed. An interesting fragment remains of the hospital of Maison Dieu, founded by William of Brechin in 1264. Between the town and the river, and only separated from the former by a ravine, stands Brechin Castle, an ancient seat of the Maules of Panmure, now represented by the Earl of Dalhousie; it is built on a precipitous rock overhanging the stream, and in 1303 sustained a siege of 20 days from the English army under Edward I. but Sir Thomas Maule, its commander, being killed it surrendered: the south front, towards the river, incorporates some remains of the original structure, together with more recent work, including a square tower: the west front is more regular, and has round towers at the angles. This town has given birth to more men of genius and literary distinction than any place, in proportion to its size, in Scotland, among whom may be enumerated William Maitland F.R.S., F.S.A. the laborious historian of Edinburgh and London, who was born here c. 1693, and died at Montrose 16 July, 1757; John Gillies LL.D., F.R.S., F.S.A. the historian of Greece, b. 18 Jan. 1747, and d. at Clapham, 15 Feb. 1836; his brother, Lord Adam Gillies, Dr. Thomas Guthrie, b. 1809, and Colvin Smith, the eminent artist, to whom Sir Walter Scott sat on five different occasions. The antiquity of Brechin as a royal burgh is of remote date; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, treasurer, hospital master and seven councillors, who are also police commissioners. The burgh joins with Forfar, Montrose, Arbroath and Inverbervie in returning one member to Parliament. A burgh or bailie court is held every Wednesday, and oftener when necessary; the magistrates are the judges; a justice of peace court is held on the first Wednesday in every month and when required, and a sheriff court on the third Tuesday of January, March, May, July, September and November; the two last-mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims.

The see of Brechin was founded in 1150, by David I., who also richly endowed it, and the cathedral church of the Holy Trinity, erected in the 13th century, originally consisted of an aisleless choir of uncertain length and a clerestoried nave of five bays with narrow aisles; the transepts, removed in 1806, do not appear to have formed part of the original plan, but to have been a later addition, and were small and of no great height: the north-west tower, with its projecting embattled parapet, turret and octagonal spire, dates from about the middle of the 15th century: the height to the top of the spire is nearly 130 feet, and there are 3 bells: the choir, up to the date of the recent restoration, lay in ruins. A fragment of a Celtic tomb slab, formerly on the floor of the choir, has been removed to the interior; in 1806 the church was to a large extent rebuilt in a very debased style, and greatly injured, the aisles being widened and raised so as to destroy the clerestory, galleries carried round the whole interior, and the east and west piers much injured by the erection of stone stairs: the west end of the south aisle now abuts on a fine round tower of the 10th century, 103 feet in height, and tapering slightly towards the top, and finished with a corbelled cornice and octagonal spire; the circular-headed entrance is about 6 feet from the ground, and has over it a figure of the "Crucifixion," and on either side rude carvings of figures: the west doorway, recessed in six orders, is of the same period as the choir; the window over it displays rich flowing flamboyant tracery, showing French influence: the extreme length of the church, excluding the bell tower, is 94 feet: originally, with the choir, it is said to have been about 180 feet; the communion plate is of beaten silver, one cup bearing the date of 1631; there are also two pewter flagons dated 1648 and three pewter plates dated 1641. The cathedral was extensively restored in 1900, under the direction of Mr. John Honeyman R.S.A. architect, of Glasgow, at a cost of over £13,000, mostly collected by public subscription. In the course of the reconstruction traces were found of a Norman church, probably built about 100 years after the tower, and demolished to make room for the existing building. The work of restoration included the rebuilding of (1) the whole of the aisle, walls and gables, (2) the erection of a new north aisle, called the Queen's aisle, (3) the rebuilding of the north porch, (4) the south transept, (5) more than half the choir, and (6) all the east gable. The windows of the choir are now filled with fine stained glass by Henry Holiday, of London. There is also in the south transept a fine Burne-Jones window. The cathedral of Brechin was one of the few places of worship in which the service of the liturgy was for some time performed after its promulgation in 1637: the bishop was a man of singularly strong and daring character, and ascended the pulpit with a pair of pistols under his gown, determined to carry the behests of royalty into execution at whatever risk. There is also an Established church for the East parish, and the Gardner memorial church, built in 1867-8, at a cost of £11,000, in memory of the late Rev. Alexander Gardner M.A. for 50 years minister of Brechin, and his son, James Alexander Gardner, advocate, of Edinburgh: £7,000 of the total cost was provided by the late Mrs. Milne, of Moorbank, Brechin: it is endowed under the terms of the will of the late Rev. A. Gardner M.A. There are also four United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, and chapels for the Congregationalists and Plymouth Brethren. The Episcopal church of St. Andrew, built in 1888, will seat 416 persons; the rectory, net value £340, has been held since 1912 by the Rev. Kenneth L. Reid M.A. of St. Andrew's University.

The Municipal buildings, in Bank street, include a court room, council chamber &c. The Post Office is in Clerk street and Parish Council chambers in Panmure street. Flax spinning and the manufacture of linen and a paper mill employ numerous hands; there are also two distilleries. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland, British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited are established here. A newspaper, entitled the "Brechin Advertiser," established in 1848, is published on Tuesday morning. The principal hotels are the Commercial, Dalhousie and the Crown. The Mechanics' Institution is an edifice in the Tudor style, and has an embattled parapet with pinnacles; a fine tower rises in the centre to a height of 80 feet, and commands a fine prospect; the building contains an excellent library and reading and billiard rooms; there are also numerous valuable paintings, which were presented by Lord Panmure and others. The Public Library, near the Railway Station, was erected with a sum of £5,000, given anonymously. The premises of the Young Men's Christian Association, in Bank street, were built at a cost of £1,500, and opened in 1878. The Almshouse, in Infirmary street, was erected in 1878, at a cost of £3,000, with sanctional accommodation for 64 persons; the Infirmary, close by, is a substantial-looking building of stone, erected in 1869, for 36 patients. The cemetery, approached from Panmure street, was opened in 1857 and enlarged in 1899. Trinity Muir, 1 mile north of the town, besides being the site of a fair, is resorted to by cricket and golf players during the summer. The public park, off Park road, was opened in 1887, and subsequently enlarged to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria in 1897; in St. Ninian's square are gardens and walks well laid out. Fairs are held on the 3rd Thursday in June for cattle and horses and on the Tuesday after the 2nd Thursday in July for wool; hiring market on 1st Tuesday after 28th May and on Nov. 28th and first Tuesday in March for married ploughmen, which is called the "Carlie Market." The weekly market is held on Tuesday, and a local company conducts weekly a large sale of cattle &c. The area of the parish comprises 13,880 acres; area of burgh, 641 acres; rateable value, £58,210; population in 1911, royal, parliamentary and municipal burgh, 8,439; landward, 1,397; total, 9,836. BRIDGEND, see LINTRATHEN.

BROUGHTY FERRY is a town and was formerly a police burgh, but on November 3, 1913, it was annexed to Dundee municipal borough and civil parish, under which place full particulars will be found.

BUDDONNESS, see BARRY.

BULLIONFIELD, see LIFF.

CARESTON is a small parish about 2 miles by 1½, situated between the parishes of Brechin and Tannadice, 4 miles south-west of Brechin town, on the north bank of the South Esk; it is bounded on the north and north-west by Menmuir and Fern parishes respectively, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin. There is a station in the village on the Brechin and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway. The land is composed of beautiful and well cultivated braes, sloping to the south. Here is an Established church. The castle of Careston, erected in the 13th or 14th century, and now the property and residence of William Shaw Adamson esq. J.P. was formerly one of the residences of the Earls of Crawford: above the mantelpiece in the old drawing room are the royal arms of Scotland, with an inscription. W. S. Adamson esq. J.P. is the sole landowner. The area of the parish comprises 2,117 acres; rateable value, £2,262; the population in 1911 was 213.

CARMYLLIE is a parish 3 miles from north to south by 5 in breadth, and bounded by parts of 7 parishes, viz.: Panbride, Monikie, Dunnichen, Kirkden, Inverkeilor, St. Vigeans and Arbirlot. The parish of Carmyllie includes the villages of Redford and Greystone, the former of which is about 4 miles south from Friockheim and about 6 west from Arbroath, having a station on the Dundee and Arbroath joint railway (Carmyllie branch), and being in the Arbroath small debt court district. The river Elliot runs through the parish, and the surface is hilly with a fairly productive soil, and near are some large quarries of paving stone. There are Established and United Free churches. Cattle sales are held in April and October. The Earl of Dalhousie D.L. William Rettie esq. and Lt.-Col. T. H. Ouchterlony are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,553 acres; rateable value, £7,661 8s. 11d.; the population in 1911 was 847.

Post Office; Mrs. Alex. Binnie, sub-postmistress. Letters through Arbroath. The nearest money order & telegraph office & savings bank is at Friockheim, 4½ miles distant CARNOUSTIE is a thriving town on the North Sea and a police burgh, two-thirds of which are within the parish of Barry and the remainder, known as Newton and Westhaven portions, in the parish of Panbride; it is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and is 10 east-by-north from Dundee, with a station on the joint line of the Caledonian and North British railways. The Bay, to the north-west of which the town stands, is large, but too open and shallow to be useful as a harbour. Carnoustie is now much resorted to as a watering-place and has good bathing and accommodation for visitors, besides golf clubs. Two golf courses of 18 holes; there are also tennis courts and bowling greens. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies, and six councillors. It is well drained, and supplied with water from the reservoir at Crombie, belonging to the Dundee Water Works. There are jute works, vitriol works, an iron foundry, boot and shoe factories and vegetable preserve works. There is a newspaper published in the town, the "Carnoustie Gazette," every Friday. The Union Club Limited, in Park avenue, opened 2 Jan. 1899, was erected at a cost of about £1,500. The Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited have branches here, and there is also a Savings Bank. The Municipal offices in the High street were erected in 1897-8, at a cost, including furnishing, of £3,000, from designs by Mr. James P. Bruce, architect, Dundee and Carnoustie. There are Established and United Free churches: the Episcopal Church of the Holy Rood, built in 1881, will seat 274 persons, and attached to it is the Monifieth Mission. The Rev. Joseph Brewer Jobberns M.A. of Aberdeen University, has been rector since 1898. The area of the burgh is 730 acres; rateable value, £34,989, of which £27,042 is in Barry parish and £7,947 in Panbride parish; the population in 1911 was 5,358 burgh, and 3,402 ecclesiastical.

DUNDEE

DUNDEE is a seaport, royal burgh and parish, and since 1889 has been a city; it is second in point of commercial position and third in population in Scotland; the city lies on the north bank of the Firth of Tay, about 8 miles from the mouth of the Firth, and the parish, which is about 5 miles east to west and 3 north to south, is bounded on the south by the Tay, on the north by the united parishes of Mains and Strathmartine, on the east by Murroes and Monifieth, and on the west by the united parish of Liff, Benvie and Invergowrie, a large portion of which is incorporated with the burgh. The city is 43 miles north from Edinburgh, 66 south-south-west from Aberdeen, 29 south-west from Montrose, 22 east-north-east from Perth, 17 south-west from Arbroath and 14 south from Forfar. The Caledonian and North British railways have each stations in the city. The Caledonian railway system connects Dundee with Perth, Stirling and the west of Scotland generally, and London and the south by the West Coast lines. The branch runs northward to Newtyle, Blairgowrie and Alyth, and another branch goes direct to Forfar, the county town. The Caledonian are joint owners with the North British Company of the Dundee and Arbroath railway, which connects Dundee with Arbroath, Montrose, Aberdeen and the whole north-east of Scotland. The North British has running powers over a certain distance over the east and west lines, and has a joint right in part of both the terminal stations—one at the east and the other at the west end of Dock street; the company has also constructed the Arbroath and Montrose direct line, which increases the facilities for communication between Dundee and the south-eastern portion of Forfarshire and the south-western portion of Kincardineshire. Alongside the west station, at the end of Dock street, is the North British Tay Bridge station. In 1870 the North British Railway company obtained an Act of Parliament for bridging the Tay at Dundee. This bridge was designed by Sir Thomas Bouch, the company's engineer, the plans being for a single line of rails only. On the 31st May, 1878, the bridge was 10,612 feet in length, and consisted of 85 spans, some of these being over 100 feet above high water level, and the cost was said to be £350,000; but on the evening of the 28th December, 1879, during the prevalence of a gale of unusual force, while the mail train from Edinburgh was passing over it, the whole of the "high girders," extending over 13 spans, were blown into the river, together with the train, leaving a gap of 2,000 feet, and upwards of 70 persons perished: the present bridge, erected from plans by William Henry Barlow C.E., F.R.S. was approved by Parliament in May, 1881, and the structure, starting from the south side of the Firth of Tay, at Wormit, comprises 84 spans, varying in breadth from 50 to 245 feet; the first four above high water mark are continued by 23 of varying size, which take the line to the south side of the navigable channel, where they connect with the 13 great spans crossing the mid channel: of these, the southern ones vary in height above high water from 63 to 77 feet; the four main spans have a height of 77 feet clear, and those on the south 58 to 75 feet; 36 spans continue the bridge from the north side of the mid channel to Dundee shore, and seven land spans carry it into Dundee; the trains run on the lower part of the great spans, and on the upper portion of the others: the whole length is about 2 miles, and it has a double set of rails on a steel floor; the foundations are on iron caissons; the contractors were Sir William Arrol and Company, of Glasgow, and the bridge was opened for general traffic in June, 1887.

The situation of Dundee is very beautiful, the river here is 2 miles broad, from the margin of which the town spreads over a gradual acclivity, ascending towards the base of a lofty and sheltering eminence called "Dundee Law," 572 feet in height. The picturesque coast of Fifeshire forms the southern border of the Tay, and a steam ferry-boat affords hourly communication between the opposite shores of the estuary. The mansions of the principal residents are ranged on the lofty bank of the Tay, westward of the town, which commands a view of the river and the beautiful scenery on the opposite coast, including Newport and Wormit. Broughty Ferry, on the north side of the Tay, is 3 miles further down the river; these places are residential suburbs of Dundee.

History.—Dundee is a place of considerable antiquity. From a fishing hamlet it came to be a walled town, with a castle of considerable strength. During the usurpation of Edward I. the town was made the station of an English garrison; and in the course of the struggle for the Scottish crown between that prince and Robert Bruce, Dundee was twice taken and retaken. The patriot Wallace is said to have received his education at the Grammar School of Dundee. Of the castle of Dundee, not a vestige now remains. Its site was near the present Castle street, formed by blasting a portion of the rock on which it stood. The town was destroyed in the reign of Richard II., and again in that of Edward VI., but on each occasion it speedily recovered, and resumed its rank among the principal Scottish towns, being several times pledged as security for ransoms, and for the fulfilment of treaties. It was also a place of royal residence, there being a palace (known as Whitehall) to the south of the Nethergate, and a mint at the foot of the Overgate. Robert III. was the first sovereign who struck coin at the mint. Dudhope Castle, originally the seat of the Scrymgeour family, standard bearers to the Scottish kings, stands on the face of the rising ground to the north of the town, and was at his death the property of Graham of Claverhouse, Viscount Dundee: in recent times it was used as a military barracks, but the castle and grounds now form a part of the Dudhope Park. In Dundee the reformed religion found some of its earliest and warmest defenders. So zealous was the town in its cause, as to be honoured with the appellation of "the second Geneva." In 1544 George Wishart, who suffered martyrdom at St. Andrews, preached here, and on one occasion narrowly escaped assassination at the hands of one of Cardinal Beaton's emissaries; in memory of his escape the East Port or Cow-gate, where he preached, and the only portion of the old walls extant, is still kept standing. In April, 1645, the Duke of Montrose took Dundee by assault. The last calamity of this kind that befell the town was its capture and plunder a few years later by General Monk, an event which is the subject of many local traditions. A few eminent men have conferred honour on Dundee, from its being the place either of their birth, education or labour:—Hector Boece, the historian; Sir William Wallace; John Blair; Ferguson, the poet; Sir George Mackenzie, the scholar and lawyer; and in more recent days Drs. Small, Willison, Davidson and Russell; Nicoll, the poet; George Gilfillan, the critic and preacher; Bishop Forbes; Dr. Thomas Dick, the astronomer and christian philosopher; the naval victor, Admiral Duncan; and Lord Ritchie, a former Chancellor of the Exchequer. The author of the "Song of the Shirt," Thomas Hood, also resided in the town for a short time, and some of his first efforts at versifying appeared in the columns of the "Dundee Advertiser."

Municipal.—Dundee was created a royal burgh by William the Lion in return for the attention paid to his brother, the Earl of Huntingdon, who, in returning from the Crusades, was shipwrecked near this port. The oldest charter now extant is one granted by Robert Bruce, confirming these burghal privileges. It was made a city by a royal charter granted in 1889, and its chief magistrate was advanced to the dignity of Lord Provost in 1892: in 1894 it was created a county, the lord provost being appointed lord lieutenant of the same. The municipal government of Dundee was exercised by a lord provost, six bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, a hospital master and kirk master, and a council, including the magistrates, of 28 members, but on March 31st, 1913, Broughty Ferry was added to the borough and the corporation now consists of seven bailies and 33 councillors.

There are 13 trade guilds, viz.: the Masons, Wrights and Slaters (known as the Three United Trades), the Bakers, Shoe Makers, Glovers, Tailors, Bonnet Makers, Fleshers, Hammermen, Weavers, Dyers and the Maltmen incorporation. Six courts are held within the town—the Burgh or Bailie Court, the Sheriff's Court, the Circuit Court, the Licensing Court, the Police Court and the Justice of Peace Small Debt Court. The city is divided into nine districts or wards. Dundee sends two representatives to Parliament. The city is lighted with gas from works the property of the city, but in March, 1893, the electric light was provided from works, erected by the Corporation, in Dudhope crescent, at a cost for buildings and fittings of £30,000: a larger electric station was erected in 1908, near the river, at a cost of over £50,000. The corporation also own the waterworks, drawing their supplies from Monikie, an artificial loch 11½ miles north-east of Dundee, and from Lintrathen, a large Highland loch, 23 miles from Dundee. In 1899 they acquired the tramway system. The Town House, also called the City Chambers, in the High street, was completed in 1734, from designs by the elder Adam, and comprises a Guild Hall, Record Chamber, Council Chamber and Town Clerk's and other offices; the front has a piazza, and from the centre of the building rises a spire 140 feet high.

Commerce and Manufactures.—Dundee is the principal seat of the linen and jute industries. When Monk captured the place in 1651, 60 vessels were found in the harbour, so richly laden as to afford a booty to the captors exceeding in value the whole of their spoils "in the wars throughout the three nations;" the plunder, however, did not enrich the captors, for the ships sank in passing the bar. For several years subsequently few vessels floated in the deserted harbour; but in 1660 37 vessels arrived in the port; in 1673, 49; in 1680, 85; by 1731 the number had considerably decreased, and the trade continued to dwindle till this once flourishing port was chiefly the resort of fishermen and smugglers. But the situation of Dundee, the commodiousness of its harbour, and the enterprise of its inhabitants, caused the tide of commerce to turn, and the town, from 1792, has continued to progress. In 1745 the port dues scarcely amounted to £1,200; but in 1792 the number of vessels belonging to the town had increased to 116, of 8,550 tons; and about the same period the foreign clearances outwards and inwards were nearly 12,000 tons, while the coasting trade was about 60,000. In consequence of the augmentation of its shipping, new sea walls, quays and wharves were built, the tidal harbour was extended, wet docks and graving docks constructed, and there are good facilities for the rapid loading and discharge of vessels. In 1815 the management of the harbour was placed in the hands of 20 commissioners appointed annually under an Act of Parliament; but by an Act passed in June, 1830, the control was vested in perpetuity in trustees to be elected annually, consisting of the provost, the four senior bailies, the Dean of Guild and the Boxmaster of the Fraternity of Masters and Seamen (ex-officiis), one councillor, five merchant members of the Guildry, three members of the Nine Incorporated Trades, one member of the Three Incorporated Trades, and four landed proprietors in the county of Forfar (21 trustees in all). By an Act passed in 1869 the constitution of the trust was altered by the addition of three members from the Chamber of Commerce, three from the shipowners, three from the Harbour Ratepayers and two municipal electors, making 32 trustees in all; the provost, four senior bailies, Dean of Guild, Boxmaster of Fraternity of Masters and Seamen and the Convener of the Nine Incorporated Trades being trustees ex-officiis. In 1873 the undertaking of the Tay Ferries was vested in the trustees, and in 1875 the lighting and buoying of the river and firth of Tay was taken over from the Fraternity of Masters and Seamen. The total expenditure for maintaining the harbour and Tay Ferries to 31st May, 1915, inclusive of interest and debt and amounts credited to sinking, depreciation and reserve funds was £3,693,609 19s. The total cost of the harbour and Tay Ferries property up to the same date amounted to £1,355,122 0s. 11d. The debt due by the Dundee Harbour on 31st May, 1915, amounted to £434,828 4s. 5d.

The number of vessels that arrived at the port with cargoes and in ballast in 1918 (including Perth) from foreign countries was 42, of 81,926 tons, and in the general coasting trade 156, of 98,367 tonnage.

The number that departed in the foreign trade was 16, of 22,099 tons, and in the general coasting trade 170, of 144,994 tonnage.

The number of vessels registered as belonging to the port under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," on December 31st, 1918, was 47, of the aggregate register of 21,091 tons. The whale fishery employs several ships from this port. Steam navigation is conducted by the Dundee, Perth and London Shipping Company, whose vessels ply to London twice a week and to Hull weekly. There is also regular steam communication with Newcastle, Liverpool, Manchester, Hamburg, Rotterdam, Belfast &c. besides several large steamers engaged in the coal trade. Direct steam communication is carried on with New York at irregular intervals. The number of fishing boats registered at Dundee on December 31st, 1918, under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," was 89; aggregate tonnage, 771. In 1918 8 vessels were built; net tonnage, 14,930.

The earliest articles produced in the town seem to have been soap and glass, which engaged a number of hands; and the brewing of ale was carried on to some extent. The glass manufacture has died out, as has also the sugar refining, which was once carried on. In 1866, however, linseed crushing was established, and has since been carried on to a moderate extent. The wholesale shoe trade, which at one time flourished in this town, has been revived, and there are two large factories, employing a considerable number of persons. The manufacture of marmalade has for many years employed a large number of hands, Dundee marmalade being famous throughout the world. Messrs. James Keiller and Son Limited and Messrs. Lindsay and Low are both large makers, and there are other firms extensively engaged in this trade. At an early period the wants of shipping led to the introduction of the manufacture of cordage, which still remains a branch of commerce, but not to such an extent as formerly.

The total quantity of the imports of flax in 1919 was 3,333 tons, value £661,405.

Jute was first brought into notice at Dundee by the late Thomas Neish esq. and was at first imported in small quantities to London and Liverpool, and thence transhipped to Dundee; but as the trade grew in importance, manufacturers imported direct from Calcutta, and the direct imports now greatly exceed those into London. Most of the jute received in Liverpool and London also finds its way to Dundee. In 1849 the imports (exclusive of coast-ways) amounted to 8,176 tons: in 1850, 8,127 tons were received.

In 1904 (a poor year) 1,080,000 bales of jute, of 400 lbs. each, were imported from Calcutta, the price averaging over £14 per ton; in the year 1919 the quantity was 205,683 tons, of the value of £11,780,456, and of jute manufactures (other than cordage), £1,057,923.

The quantities and value of other principal articles imported in 1919 was:—Wheat, meal and flour, 126,200 cwts. £183,000; timber and wood, 36,840 loads, £350,190; paper making material, 1,479 tons, £26,358; paper and articles of paper, 19,563 cwts. £28,664; oil-seed cake, 125 tons, £3,140; total value of all articles imported, £14,498,935.

The exports of manufactured goods from the harbour by no means represent the extent of business done in the town, the larger portion of the manufactured goods being sent by rail to Glasgow and Liverpool for export to the United States, South America, Australia &c.

The quantities and value of the principal articles of the produce and manufactures of the United Kingdom exported in 1919 was:—Jute yarn, 400,100 lbs. £20,835; jute piece goods, 10,250,700 yards, £531,542; linen yarn, 8,600 lbs. £880; bags and sacks, 22,079 doz. £23,362; potatoes, raw, 652,667 cwts. £283,744; total value of all articles, £1,118,116.

The total value of the exports of Foreign and Colonial merchandise in 1919 was £1,255,374.

The gross amount of Customs Revenue received at this port in 1919 was £386,684.

Originally there were only four steam spinning mills; there are now probably above 100, including spinning and weaving factories, where thread is woven into osnaburghs, sheetings, baggings, sailcloth, sacking, dowlas &c. At the commencement of the civil war in America, the trade of Dundee increased to a most extraordinary extent, fabrics of jute and linen being in great demand to take the place of cotton. The manufacture of machinery, steam engines, boilers and millwright work is in a flourishing condition and carried on extensively by several eminent firms, among whom may be mentioned Urquhart, Lindsay and Co. Limited, Blackness foundry and the Caledon Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. Limited, Lilybank foundry. Iron ship building and marine engineering are also important features in the general prosperity and industry of the city, and give employment to a large number of artisans. The Dundee Ship Building Co. Limited and the Caledon Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. Limited are the principal firms engaged in these important industries. There are also several extensive saw mills and timber yards, the principal of which belong to Messrs. Bell and Sime Limited and Messrs. Fleming and Barry Limited.

Although Dundee is not conspicuous for architectural beauty, it contains several handsome streets. In the central portion is a wide oblong area, called the High street, on the south side of which stands the Town House. Directly south of this street lie the Docks, and to the south-west the terminal stations of the North British and Caledonian railways, and northward various streets lead to Barrack Park and the high ground known as Dundee Law. The Clydesdale Bank, at the east end of High street, is also a good building. Dock street runs from the railway stations along the line of Docks, and from the west end of Dock street, Union street forms a communication with the Nethergate; it contains excellent shops; running north from the centre of Dock street, Commercial street is a splendid thoroughfare, lined on either side by elegant shops and houses, and the old and narrow thoroughfares called Murraygate and Seagate have given place to wide streets. Whitehall street, completed in 1893, runs from the Nethergate southwards; at the lower end it curves semi circularly towards South Union street on the west, and Green market on the east. In Meadowside new premises were completed and opened in 1899 by the Scottish Provident Institution, the Pearl Life Assurance Co. and the Prudential Assurance Co. The Albert Institute, begun in 1867 and completed in 1889, is to the south-east of the High school; the western portion was erected from designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott R.A. and the eastern and northern portions from others by Mr. Mackenzie, a local architect, and Mr. Alexander, the city architect; the cost of the entire building was about £50,000, exclusive of the site, which cost £8,000 It comprises a large hall (used as the reference and commercial library), libraries, reading room, museum, and fine picture galleries. These are free to the public, the town having 52 years ago adopted the "Free Libraries Act." The first branch library was founded at Lochee, with a bequest of the late Thomas H. Cox, of Maulesden, in 1894; four other branches have been opened at Arthurstone terrace, Blackness avenue, Coldside and St. Roques, and the large central reading rooms and sculpture galleries at Ward road (1901-1915). There is also a branch technological museum at Dudhope park, the cost in each case being defrayed by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. Adjoining are the Victoria Art Galleries, opened by the 8th Duke of Argyll K.G., K.T., P.C. October 26th, 1889. In the grounds in front of the Albert Institute is a bronze statue, modelled by Mr. Steele, of Edinburgh, of George Kinloch, the first representative of the burgh in the first reformed Parliament; in the south-west corner of the grounds is a bronze statue of Burns, also by Steele. There is also a statue by John Hutchison R.S.A. of the late James Carmichael, the inventor of the fan blast, and opposite the principal entrance is a splendid colossal statue in bronze of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, by the late Harry Bates A.R.A. erected as a Jubilee memorial in 1887, and unveiled by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. A fountain, erected at considerable cost, faces the west front of the Institute. The Royal Exchange and Chamber of Commerce, Panmure street, erected in 1852, at a cost of about £10,000, is a building in the Flemish-Gothic style of the 14th century, with a fine tower. To the south of the Albert Institute stand a Club House, in the Venetian style, the United Free church, and the National Bank buildings. The Royal arch, in the centre of Dock street and spanning the north end of the Mid quay, raised to commemorate the landing near this spot of H.M. Queen Victoria, on her first visit, consists of a wide central arch, flanked by two of smaller dimensions; each front is richly sculptured, and octagonal turrets rise from the summit. The Custom House, in Dock street, is a building with a Classic portico. The Sailors' Home, opened by the 13th Earl of Dalhousie K.T. 16 December, 1881, at a cost of upwards of £12,000, is designed in the Elizabethan style, and has sleeping room for about 65 seamen; and here also are the offices of the Mercantile Marine Department. The Public Hall, now a picture house, in Bank street, is a building in the Italian style; the hall itself is 130 by 60 feet, and 42 feet 6 inches high, with room for about 2,500 people. The organ, provided in 1864, cost £1,500. The orchestra will hold some 280 performers, and there is a gallery for 200 persons. The Court House, in which the assizes are held, is a building in the Classic style, upon the pediment of which the Royal arms are boldly sculptured; adjoining it is the gaol. The Post Office, in Meadowside, opened in 1898, is a building of stone in the French Renaissance style, and cost £21,366.

The Eastern Club is in Albert square; the Liberal Club is in Reform street, and there are several other smaller clubs.

The Corporation Public Baths and Washhouses, in Constable street, were opened in 1902.

Ecclesiastical.—The "Old Steeple," in the Nethergate, a little west of High street, is a fine solid tower, built, probably, in the early part of the 15th century; it is 156 feet high, with walls 8 feet thick, and formerly contained 2 bells, the larger recast in 1819 and the smaller bearing the date 1693: but when the "Steeple" was restored in 1872, under the superintendence of the late Sir Gilbert Scott, 6 more bells were provided, being gifts from various citizens, and the whole 8 were rehung in the bell chamber: this "Steeple" forms the tower of the town churches, of which there are three, all connected with it, and known as the "East," "South" and "Steeple" churches: the two first were destroyed by fire in 1841, but were rebuilt in a very short time, the East church being reopened on the 10th March, 1844, and the South church in 1847; the same architect, Mr. Burn, of Edinburgh, designed both churches, which are in the Decorated style: the parish church consists of a nave of five bays, with clerestory and open timber roof and side aisles divided from the nave by arcades of clustered pillars: there are galleries in the aisles and across the west end: the stained east window of three lights was erected in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria: nearly all the other windows are filled with stained glass, and there are two memorial brasses; the South church stands north and south, and has a western transept, containing a gallery. St. Clement's, or "The Steeple" church, which is the westernmost of the three, is a plain edifice of stone in the Perpendicular style, erected in 1789: a gallery surrounds all three sides. These three churches are really one large building, the Steeple church being the nave, the South church the north and south transepts, and the East church the chancel, and the whole occupies the site of the original church of St. Mary. Adjoining these churches is the Town or Market Cross, moved here from High street, and consisting of a pillar surmounted by a unicorn supporting a shield.

St. Paul's United Free church and St. Enoch's Established church are in the Nethergate, and St. Mark's Established church, St. John's United Free church and the McCheyne Memorial United Free church, in the Perth road. St. Paul's Episcopal Cathedral church for the diocese of Brechin, situated on the Castle Hill, was built c. 1855 and consecrated in 1865, and is an edifice in the Gothic style, from the designs of the late Sir Gilbert Scott R.A. and has a tower with lofty spire, containing a peal of bells: it will seat 600 persons. In King street is a meeting-house for the Glassites—a sect founded by Mr. John Glass, who was made a freeman of Dundee by the town council in 1753. The Gilfillan Memorial Hall, in Whitehall crescent, is used for worship; it is also adapted for holding concerts and meetings.

The Episcopal church of St. Luke, Strathmartine, built in 1903, will seat 200 persons.

For other places of worship, see page 473.

Schools.—The High School, in Euclid crescent, was erected in 1834, at a cost of £10,000, since which extensive additions have been made to it, including a gymnasium, workshop, physical laboratory and recreation ground, and class rooms for girls have also been erected in Euclid street: the institution is largely indebted to the late ex-Bailie Harris, who gave £20,000 for the purpose of improving it: Miss Harris, his sister, has also been a great benefactor. The Harris Academy, in Park place, erected with a sum of £10,000, bequeathed for the purpose of promoting secondary education, was opened in 1885. The Morgan Academy, in the Forfar road, owes its existence to the benevolence of the late Mr. Morgan, a native of Dundee, who left the bulk of his furtune, reduced by litigation to £73,500, for its erection and maintenance. It was originally designed for 100 boys, the sons of tradesmen, mechanics and persons of the working classes generally, in Dundee, Forfar, Montrose or Arbroath, the preference being given to the boys of parents belonging to this town, but in 1889 the Endowed Schools Commission converted it into a secondary school; the building, erected at a cost of £15,000, is in the Flemish-Gothic style, from designs by Messrs. Peddie and Kinnear, architects, of Edinburgh, and is quadrangular in form, two storeys in height, with an interior open court, and a centre tower rising to a height of 120 feet. University College, in the Nethergate, was originally founded and endowed through the munificence of the late Miss Baxter, of Balgavies, and the late Dr. John Boyd Baxter, who provided a sum of £150,000 for this purpose; buildings already on the site were utilised as class rooms, laboratories, and a college hall: a large chemical laboratory was erected at a cost of about £12,877, and £69,000 was spent in purchasing and equipping the buildings, and £100,000 appropriated as a permanent endowment fund: the deed of endowment and trust directs that the college shall be for promoting the education of persons of both sexes for the study of science, literature and the fine arts: the later endowments include the John Boyd Baxter chair of natural history, the J. F. White chair of botany, the T. H. Cox chair of anatomy, the Harris chair of physics, the physiology chair, the Armitstead bursaries, the David Myles bursaries, the Smart bursary in engineering, the Laing bursary in engineering, the William Strong research scholarship, the Carnegie physics laboratory, the Peters electrical engineering laboratory, the engineering laboratory, the Fleming gymnasium, the Ellenbank and Unionmount extensions, given by Miss Symers, of St. Helens, and others, and the joint medical school by Sir W. Ogilvy Dalgleish bart. and others; there is also a large general fund for providing and equipping new buildings, and for preserving the open spaces in front, used as botanical gardens: the institution is entirely unsectarian, and has been affiliated to the ancient University of St. Andrews, and Faculties of Arts, Medicine, Science and Law have now been established: there are at present thirteen professors and a number of lecturers. St. Andrews Provincial Committee for the Training of Teachers, in connection with the University of St. Andrews, was formed in 1906. Dundee Training College, Park place, is under the management of the Provincial Committee; the new building, which was opened in 1920, has accommodation for the training of about 400 students, and is adjoined by a school for demonstrating and trying out practical educational conclusions. The Dundee Technical College and School of Art, in Bell street, a building of stone, erected at a cost of about £80,000, was opened for classes in 1910: the College is used for technical and art instruction for the East of Scotland, and provides for over 2,000 students. The Dundee Orphan Institution, founded in 1815, is at Craigie terrace, overlooking the river. The Dundee Industrial Schools Society's School for Girls, at Balgay, Blackness road, was erected in 1896, at a cost of £12,000, and will hold 120; the school for boys is at Baldovan, a healthy village to the north of the town. The "Mars" Training Ship for Homeless and Destitute Boys is an old two-decker, moored in the Tay, at Woodhaven, and here four hundred boys are trained, chiefly with a view to their joining the merchant service or entering the Royal Navy. The Institution for the education of the deaf and dumb, established in 1846, and situated at Dudhope Bank, Lochee road, is maintained by the directors of the Dundee Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, from the interest of invested funds, and from property left by the late James Key esq.: new dormitories were added in 1906 at a cost of about £400; boot makers' and tailors' shops were added in 1910.

The Dundee District Mental Hospital, at West Green, in the parish of Liff and Benvie, about 4 miles west of Dundee, was erected in 1882, at a cost of £50,000, from designs by Messrs. Edward and Robertson, architects, of Dundee, and will hold upwards of 400 patients; the Directors of the Dundee Royal Mental Hospital lease the private mental hospital, erected in 1899 at a cost of about £20,000, from the District Board, and this building is available for about 70 persons; the grounds in connection extend to nearly 100 acres. The Poor Law Institution, opened in November, 1856, at a cost of about £10,000, and since enlarged, will now hold 992 inmates. The Curr Night Refuge, in West Bell street, erected by money left by the late Mrs. Curr, affords a retreat for the night to homeless strangers. The Royal Infirmary, erected in 1853, near to Dudhope park, from designs by Messrs. Coe and Goodwin, of London, has two wings, a central tower, and embattled parapets; the infirmary provides for 400 in-patients; in 1895 a new operating theatre was built at a cost of £2,000; in 1895-7 two Nurses' Homes were erected at a cost of £6,000, and in 1900 two pavilions and an additional nurses' home were opened, the whole costing £7,000; in 1906 a further extension for 120 beds was made at a cost of £18,500; in 1910 a new out-patient department was opened at a cost, including alterations to the existing premises, of £4,000. The Royal Victoria Hospital for Incurables, Balgay, Blackness road, established in 1899, at a cost of £10,000, is a building of stone in the Renaissance style, from designs by the late Mr. J. Murray Robertson, and has 55 beds: the hospital has an endowment of £40,000. In 1899 Mr. Alexander Moncur, of this city, gave £10,000 to establish and equip a hospital for consumption; to this hospital a new cancer wing was added in 1907 at a cost of £5,500, defrayed by the late ex-Provost Moncur; the designs were prepared by Mr. James Findlay, architect, and the building now holds 55 patients. The St. Mary's Sisterhood and Home for Incurables, in King street, provides for 26 aged or invalid women; five of the beds are endowed. The Public Gymnasium, in the Ward road, opened in 1892, and designed by Bailie M'Culloch, of Dundee, is in the French Renaissance style: it is spacious and well appointed. Adjoining the old entrance to the barracks is the public bleaching green, and near this spot a time gun has been placed.

Besides the burial grounds belonging to the Corporation, the Dundee Cemetery Co. Limited, has a fine cemetery in the Perth road, covering an area of 12 acres: in this cemetery lie the remains of William Thom, known as the Inverury Poet, and the author of the "Mitherless Bairn." To the east of the Baxter Park is the Eastern Necropolis, a beautifully laid out cemetery, and to the west of the Balgay Park is the Western Necropolis.

Baxter Park, at the east end of the city, 37 acres in extent, was presented to the town in 1863 by the late Sir David Baxter bart. and endowed with funds necessary to maintain it, at a total cost of not less than £50,000; the park was beautifully laid out by the late Sir Joseph Paxton. In 1869 the Corporation acquired Balgay Hill, a wooded eminence at the west end of the town, to be used partly as a public park and partly as a cemetery for the west end of the burgh: the portion retained as a public park is 36 acres in extent, finely wooded, and from the higher parts of the ground magnificent views are obtained. The Law Hill, behind the town, 17 acres; Magdalen Green, 20 acres, close by the river at the west end of the town; Dudhope Park, 23 acres in extent, acquired by the Corporation early in 1895; Lochee Park, 25 acres; Fairmuir Park, 17 acres; Stobsmuir Park, 9 acres, and Victoria Park, 22 acres, are also laid out as public parks: the Castle is used for manual instruction classes. The "Esplanade" was formed by an arrangement with the railway companies when the Tay Bridge Works were constructed, and was later extended westward.

Newspapers.—There are two daily morning papers, the "Dundee Advertiser" and "The Dundee Courier," and one daily evening paper, "The Evening Telegraph and Post." The weekly papers are "The People's Journal," "Thomson's Weekly News," "The Saturday Post," "The Dundee Catholic Herald," "The People's Friend," "My Weekly" and "The Happy Home" (weekly magazine journals), and "The Red Letter," "Weekly Companion," "Weekly Welcome" and "Girls' Weekly." In Bank street are situated the offices and printing factory of Messrs. John Leng and Co. Limited: the main building is 215 feet in length; here are printed the "Dundee Advertiser," "People's Journal," "People's Friend," "My Weekly," "The Happy Home," and other popular publications. The New Courier buildings are in Meadowside.

The principal market days are Tuesday and Friday; and here is a cattle and sheep market held at Carolina port every Tuesday. Fairs—Stobb's fair, for cattle, sheep and horses, on the 11th July, or the first Tuesday following (o.s.); Dundee first fair, for cattle, sheep and horses, on the 26th August; if that day falls on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, then the first Tuesday after; and the second Dundee fair on the 19th September, the same rule observed as that regulating the first fair. Feeing markets for servants are held on the 28th May and on the 28th November, or on the first Friday thereafter.

In the parish, the Earl of Home K.T., T.D. David Charles Guthrie esq. the trustees of the late H. W. Scott, David Hunter and Walter Lorne Campbell esq. are the principal landowners. The area of Dundee civil parish and municipal borough is 6,548 acres; assessable value, £997,303.

The population of the royal and municipal burgh, which includes part of Mains and Strathmartine civil parish, in 1901 was 161,173, and in 1911, 165,004. The population of the municipal wards in 1911 was: First, 14,908; second, 12,823; third, 16,801; fourth, 19,955; fifth, 23,382; sixth, 18,195; seventh, 18,447; eighth, 19,376; ninth, 20,917; total, 165,004.

Included in the total population of Dundee civil parish was 153 officials, servants &c. and 311 patients in the Royal Infirmary and Maternity Hospital, 53 officials and 932 inmates of Dundee East Combination Poor Law Institutions, 12 officials and 188 inmates of Dundee West Combination Poor Law Institution, 7 officials and 119 inmates of the Balgay Girls' Industrial School, 78 in H.M. ships and 279 on other ships, and 4 officials and 78 prisoners in Dundee Prison.

The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—St. Andrew, 5,076; St. Clement, 3,853; St. David, 17,005; St. Enoch, 1,829; St. John, 5,308; St. Luke, 4,360; St. Mark, 8,929; St. Mary, 30,816; St. Matthew, 7,528; St. Paul, 9,062; Chapelshade, 5,278; Clepington, 7,504; Fairmuir, 3,061; Lochee, 2,770; Logie, 6,969; Maryfield, 7,481; Rosebank, 8,553; Wallacetown, 3,504.

The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 160,146; number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920, 81,692.

LOCHEE is an important but scattered suburb, forming part of the royal burgh of Dundee, within the united parishes of Liff and Benvie, and extending one mile and a half north-west from Dundee: it contains several mills and factories for the spinning and manufacturing of flax, jute &c.; the principal of these being the Camperdown Jute, Flax and Hemp Works, belonging to Messrs. Cox Brothers Limited, covering a space of about 25 acres, and giving employment to about 5,000 persons: these works have a tower with a peal of fine-toned bells, and a clock with four dials, which are illuminated at night. There is also a furniture manufactory here. The Dundee and Newtyle branch of the Caledonian railway passes through this place, and is connected by a branch. There are two railway stations, one in Lochee and the other at Lochee West, about a mile north. In the immediate neighbourhood are several quarries of excellent freestone, which have been wrought for a long period. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the Dundee Savings Bank. The Free Library, in High street, opened in Dec. 1895, was erected with funds provided by the late Mr. Thomas H. Cox, of Duncarse, and comprises a library, reading room and baths. Camperdown House is the residence of the Countess of Buckinghamshire, and Clement Park is the residence of Miss Cox. The Established church of St. Luke was the gift of Thomas H. Cox esq.; there is another Established church, two United Free churches, a Catholic church and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Margaret, built in 1861, and rebuilt in 1888, will seat 450 persons, and attached to it is St. Columba's Mission; the Rev. Henry Burdon B.A. of Hatfield Hall, Durham, has been rector since 1913. The United Free Church of Scotland, erected at a cost of upwards of £6,000, is a building in the Middle Pointed Gothic style, with a tower and spire rising to a height of 130 feet, and containing 8 bells, the first erected in any church in Dundee, and presented by Messrs. Cox Brothers: the church affords 1,000 sittings. The United Free Church of Scotland, in Logie street, erected in 1895, will hold 700. Four manses have been erected for the ministers of the United Free churches and two Established churches. Lochee Park, presented by Messrs. Cox Brothers, at a cost, including endowment, of upwards of £20,000, comprises 25 acres, and has a lodge of two storeys, with a tower. The population of Lochee ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,770.

DOWNFIELD, formerly a village in Mains and Strathmartine parish, is now included in the city.

BROUGHTY-FERRY is a considerable modern town, annexed to Dundee Nov. 3rd, 1913, for municipal and civil purposes; it is seated on the Firth of Tay, with stations on the Dundee and Arbroath joint railway, about 4 miles east from Dundee, nearly opposite to Ferry-Port-on-Craig, or Tayport. The place takes its name from the old castle of Broughty or "Burgh Tay" (the defence of the Tay), situated on its south-eastern extremity, on a rocky eminence jutting into the water. Broughty is divided into three districts, East Ferry and West Ferry and Barnhill: East Ferry and Barnhill are in the parish of Monifieth, and West Ferry in that of Dundee. The town, which is regularly built, and has improved very considerably, is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and is governed by commissioners of police and police magistrates, under the provisions of the Police Act of 1892. It is lighted with gas and electric light from works owned by the Dundee City Commissioners, and is supplied with water from the Dundee waterworks. At one time the East Ferry comprised only a few fishermen's huts, built along the beach, but the population is now considerable, and the place is largely frequented during the summer months on account of its pleasant scenery, pure air and good bathing facilities. The pier, constructed in 1871 at a cost of about £3,800, projects into the river for about 200 feet due south, with a width of 30 feet; at the outer end of the pier is a wooden platform and slip, supported on piles, forming an angle running eastward in the direction of the North British railway pier, which gives it a semi-dock like appearance, and provides berthage for four or five small vessels: the slip is of a uniform breadth of 20 feet, running from the top of the pier down to low water, on a gentle decline; this arrangement permits vessels to lie by at low water, and allows the landing and embarking of passengers from small steamers at any state of tide. A storehouse, office and steelyard have also been added. About half a mile to the north of Broughty-Ferry is Fort-hill, or the Hill of Balgillo, on which fortifications were erected by the English in 1548, during the regency of the Earl of Arran, when they ravaged Dundee and the surrounding country; in 1550 the works on this hill, being surrendered to an allied army of Scots, Germans and French, under M. Des Thermies, were dismantled, and there are now only scattered remains. Here are four Established churches, five United Free churches, Baptist and Congregational chapels, a Catholic church and three Mission halls. The Episcopal church of St. Mary, built in 1858, will seat 384 persons: the rectory, net value £360, has been held since 1913 by the Rev. Harold Thomas Joseph Waring M.A., B.D. of St. Andrews University. The East United Free church, built in 1865, is an edifice in the Gothic style. Branches of the Royal Bank of Scotland and the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, and a Savings Bank, are established here. There are two public halls. The "Broughty-Ferry Guide" newspaper (1886) is published every Friday. There are two public parks, the Reres Hill Park and the Orchar Park, both opened in 1887, and each consisting of about 6½ acres. The principal seats are Forbescourt, the residence of the Most Rev. Walter John Forbes Robberds D.D. Bishop of Brechin; Carbet Castle, of Miss Grimond; Balgillo, of John C. Buist esq. J.P. and Dunalestair, the property of Alexander Bruce Gilroy esq. of Castleroy, but at present unoccupied. The population of Broughty-Ferry town in 1911 was 11,085 (this now (1921) forms part of Dundee civil parish). The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was: Parish Church, 5,256; Beach Church, 1,886; St. Stephen's, 2,392.

BARNHILL, one mile east from Broughty-Ferry, in Monifieth parish, and now included in that burgh, has a station on the Dundee and Forfar direct line, and is now a favourite place of residence. Here is an Established church, and a Convalescent Home in connection with the Dundee Royal Infirmary, erected in 1876, from funds left by the late Sir David Baxter bart. and opened in March, 1877, and enlarged in 1899. There is a cemetery 8½ acres in extent.

DUNNICHEN, supposed to be derived from Dun Achen (the hill or foot of the valley), is a parish, extending 4 miles from north to south and from 2 to 4 in breadth, and containing the villages of Letham and Craichie; it is in the small debt court district of Forfar, from which town it is 4 miles distant, and is bounded on the north-west and west by Forfar parish, south-west by Inverarity, north and east by Rescobie and south-east by Kirkden. The Caledonian railway from Dundee to Forfar passes through the north-west of the parish, the nearest station being at Kingsmuir, 2 miles distant. There is an Established church at Dunnichen and a chapel of ease at Letham, where there is also a United Free church. Dunnichen House is the property of Forbes Burke esq. The greatest elevations are the hills of Dunnichen, 800 feet. The medium elevation of the parish is 360 feet above the sea level, and consists of undulations of ridges running from west to east, the greatest descent being towards Vinney Water (the only stream which runs through the parish), on the south. Sandstone and freestone abound in the parish. The land, which is nearly all arable, is tolerably fertile. Forbes Burke esq. and John Sharp Callender Brodie esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,091 acres; assessable value, £5,485; population, 1911, 1,098 civil and ecclesiastical, 1,256.

Letters through Forfar. Wall Box, Craichie. Letham, 1¼ miles distant, is the nearest money order & telegraph office

EASSIE and NEVAY, a joint parish in the small debt court district of Forfar, from which town it is distant 9 miles south-west, bounded east and south-east by the parish of Glamis, south by Newtyle, north by Airlie and west by Meigle, extends 5 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth. The Caledonian railway has a station in the parish. The land is flat and has good pasturage. The parish church, a neat building, was erected in 1833; the interior was renovated in 1915. In the garden of the old manse stand the ruins of an ancient church, with a graveyard adjoining. The Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne, Professor McIntosh, Mrs. Auchterlonie, Peter Cargill and Thomas Wedderspoon esqrs. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,052 acres; rateable value, £7,222; the population in 1911 was 486.

EAST HAVEN, see PANBRIDE.

EDZELL is a parish and village on the north-east border of the county, with a terminal station on a branch line from Brechin, of the Caledonian railway. The parish is bounded east and north by Kincardine, north-west by the parish of Lochlee, west by Lethnot and south-west by Strathmore; it is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin, and extends 12 miles from south-east to north-west by 6 in breadth. The North Esk flows in a south-east course through the entire length and the West Water along its lower border. The village is lighted with gas. The southern spurs of the Grampians occupy the upper part of the parish, which is an agricultural district with a fertile soil. There are Established and United Free churches. The Inglis Memorial Hall, presented to the village by Col. R. W. Inglis, and opened July 22nd, 1898, is an edifice of stone, with a tower containing a clock and chimes; the building includes a large hall, seating about 500 persons, and a smaller hall for about 100; there is a good library of 6,000 volumes, and as an institution, the hall has an annual endowment of £120. The ruins of the Castle of Edzell, once the seat of the Lindsays of Glen Esk, form a prominent object. The Earl of Dalhousie D.L. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 18,967 acres; rateable value, £11,191; the population in 1911 was 878 in the civil and 920 in the ecclesiastical parish, of which 42 were in Kincardineshire.

FERN is a parish in the small debt court district of Brechin, 8 miles west from that town, and bounded on the north and north-east by the parish of Lethnot and Navar, east by Menmuir, south by the Water of Noran and west by Tannadice; its length from north to south is 8 miles, and its breadth 3 miles. The Cruick water, rising in the hills in the north, runs through the centre of the parish. The nearest railway station is at Tannadice, on the Forfar and Brechin section of the Caledonian line. The surface is a rolling country, well cultivated and wooded. Here is an Established church. The free library, containing 2,000 volumes, was presented to the parish by the late F. C. Fletcher esq. in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. The Noranside Sanatorium, established in 1913, occupies a well sheltered position among old woodlands. The ruins of the once powerful Castle of Vayne stand on the Noran water. The area comprises 8,797 acres; rateable value, £4,920; population in 1911, 308.

FORFAR

FORFAR is a royal burgh, parish, seat of a presbytery and head of a poor law combination, a small debt court district and a registration district; it is 57 miles north from Edinburgh, 15 north-west from Arbroath, 15 north-by-east from Dundee and 11 south-west from Brechin, and has a station on the Caledonian railway, whose lines from Newtyle, Brechin, Broughty Ferry and Arbroath (the latter being a joint line with the North British) meet here, and there are two other stations in the parish, Kingsmuir and Clocksbriggs. The town is supplied with gas from works in North street, the property of the Corporation. Water was introduced from the Den of Ogil in 1881. The burgh, united with Montrose, Brechin, Inverbervie and Arbroath, forms the Montrose parliamentary district, constituted by the "Reform Act of 1832," and returning one member. The original charters which constituted Forfar a royal burgh are lost, but the privileges were confirmed in 1669, in virtue of which the burgh is governed by a provost, three bailies and ten councillors, a third of whom are elected annually. The revenue of the burgh, arising from lands, customs &c. may be averaged at about £2,700 yearly. A sheriff's court is held for the trial of civil and criminal cases generally; and a police court for the determination of local, civil and police affairs. The date of the erection of Forfar Castle, which stood upon an eminence to the north of the town, cannot be certified, but it is said to have been the place of meeting of the first Parliament, convened by King Malcolm Ceanmor, 1056-93, and his occasional seat of residence after the recovery of his throne from Macbeth. The magistrates of the burgh some years since removed the market cross from the street to the site of the old castle, to mark the spot where that monarch sojourned, as but few remains of the edifice are now extant. In the old churchyard lie the remains of George Don, a Scottish botanist, who died in 1856. Dr. John Jamieson, the compiler in 1809-10 of an "Etymological Dictionary of the Scottish Language," was minister of the Anti-Burgher congregation of this place from 1780 to 1797, when he left for Edinburgh, where he died 12 July, 1838. About 1 mile east are the remains of Restenneth Priory, which stood near Clocksbriggs. On the west side of the town is a fine loch, nearly a mile in length by half a mile in breadth. Upon a small artificial island, near the north end of the loch, anciently stood a nunnery, founded by Margaret, sister of Edgar Atheling and Queen of Malcolm III. surnamed "Ceanmor." During the partial drainage of the lake, many years since, weapons and instruments, conjectured to have been used by the murderers of Malcolm II. at Glamis, were fished up: a tradition asserting that the assassins, in attempting to cross the lake on the ice, fell in and perished. The Municipal Buildings are in Castle street. The chief trade of the town consists in weaving jute and linen and bleaching; there are eight factories and two bleach works, employing over 3,000 hands. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Bank of Scotland: there is also a Savings Bank. The market is held on Saturday, for butter and grain, and cattle markets are held every Monday at the Auction Marts, two adjoining the Railway station. A fair is held on the Market Muir for horses and cattle on the second Wednesday in each month from April to November. Three weekly newspapers are published, "The Forfar Herald" and "The Forfar Review" on Friday, and "The Forfar Dispatch" on Thursday. The principal hotels are the County and Commercial, the Royal, Castle street, and Jarman's Hotel, opposite the Railway station. A Public Hall, the free gift of the late Peter Reid esq. sometime provost of Forfar, stands near the Railway station, and a fine Public Park of about 15 acres, on the south side of the town, the gift of the same donor, was laid out in 1895. In 1899 a bronze statue of the late ex-provost, Peter Reid, modelled by Mr. G. Webster, of Edinburgh, was erected in Castle street, at a cost of about £600, provided by public subscription. The Town and County Hall contains a spacious upper room for public meetings. The Meffan Institute, in West High street, opened in 1898, was given to the town by the late Miss Meffan (daughter of a former provost of the burgh), at a cost of over £5,000, and contains a public reading room, lecture hall, museum and reference room, and here also is the Free Public Library, which has over 15,000 volumes; the "Public Libraries Act, 1855," was adopted in 1870.

There are three Established churches, three United Free churches, and Congregational, Baptist and Roman Catholic chapels. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, built in 1881, will seat 600 persons: the rectory, net value £310, has been held since 1919 by the Rev. Alexander Copland M.A. In the steeple of the parish church is a very fine bell, cast in 1656 by Gerdt. Meyer, and presented to the town in the 17th century by a native named Robert Strang, who, having amassed a large fortune at Stockholm, bequeathed a large sum of money for the benefit of the poor of the town. He died in Stockholm, 21 April, 1651. This bell was perfected and augmented by William Strang and his wife, Margaret Patullo, in Stockholm, 1656. The kirk session records date from 1693 onwards and are in a good state of preservation. The Lowson Memorial church was the gift of Mrs. Steele, of Beechill, in memory of her father, ex-Provost Lowson. The church, erected from the designs of A. Marshall Mackenzie LL.D., A.R.S.A., F.R.I.B.A. of Aberdeen, is a building of stone in cruciform style, with central tower and spire. The interior consists of nave, two side aisles, north and south transepts and an apse at the east end: there are sittings for about 700. The organ is the gift of Miss Lowson, of Balgowies. The font is of stone, and is an exact duplicate of the old font of Restenneth Priory, cut out of the Burghmuirhead rock. The ceiling is of oak. There are three stained glass windows. The church, which is only partially finished, was dedicated May 14, 1914. There is also a hall seating 250, and a manse for the minister. The entire cost is estimated at about £15,000.

The Forfar County Hospital for Infectious Diseases, situated in Whitehills, provides for 30 patients.

The Public Baths, built in 1910, erected on a site given by Messrs. Don Brothers, Buist and Co. Limited, were presented to the town by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. at a cost of £6,000.

The Forfar Academy, now divided into higher and lower schools, commenced its instructive course in 1815, and there are seven other public schools.

There are also a Poorhouse and an Infirmary for the benefit of the town and the neighbouring portion of the county; the former contains 85 beds and the latter 25.

The Public Cemetery, formed in 1850, occupies 16½ Scotch acres on the south side of the town, and is laid out in tasteful walks, with ornamental shrubs &c. forming a pleasant promenade. On a mound at the top of the cemetery a statue was erected in 1852, by public subscription, to the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel P.C., M.P. who died 2 July, 1850. The figure stands upon a large pedestal, beneath a dome supported on eight pillars.

Lour is the property and residence of Mrs. Isabella Carnegy, who is also the principal landowner.

The parish comprises 8,430 acres, and the rateable value is £59,435, including the value of the burgh; of the total £52,378 is general heritages and £5,448 for railways. The population of the civil parish in 1911 was 12,254, including 59 inmates and 7 officials in the Poorhouse. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was: parish church, 9,263, and St. James', 2,991.

The area of the royal and parliamentary burgh is 979 acres; rateable value, £49,611. The population in 1901 was 11,397, and in 1911, 10,849; number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920, 4,995.

FRIOCKHEIM is a village in the parish of Kirkden, and quoad sacra parish formed from Inverkeillor and Kirkden parishes, and is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, from which town it is distant 6 miles north-west, 10 south-west from Montrose, and 9 east from Forfar, with a station, 1¼ miles west, on the Dundee, Arbroath and Forfar section of the joint Caledonian and North British railway; the village is laid out on a regular plan, and was founded by the late Mr. Andson, who feued it in small lots. The Established church is a building of stone, with a steeple containing a clock with two dials, presented by the late heritor, George Gordon esq. of Melbourne; there is also a United Free church, a Church hall, and Assembly hall, and a Reading Room and Library. The chief trade of the place is bleaching of yarns and turning bobbins for the Arbroath and Dundee factories; there are also some paving stone quarries. Fairs are held for hiring on 28th May or first Thursday after, and 28th November or first Thursday after. The population in 1911 was 1,061.

GLAMIS

GLAMIS (or Glammis) is a parish 5 miles from north to south by 4 broad, bounded on the south by Auchterhouse, south-east and east by Tealing, north-east by Kinnettles, north by Kirriemuir, north-west by Airlie and west by Eassie and Nevay; it is in the small debt court district of Forfar, from which town the village of Glamis is distant 6 miles south-west, the station, on the Perth and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway, being 1½ miles distant. The river Dean runs along the parish through the Glen of Strathmore. In a park of 160 acres, a little north of the village, stands Glamis Castle, the seat of the Earls of Strathmore; it is an ancient mansion clustered round a massive tower 100 feet in height, with angle turrets and a newel stair which leads to the roof; the house has a fine hall and a private chapel, with good paintings: it was a royal residence, and the scene of the death of Malcolm II. in 1034; it subsequently became the property of Macbeth, after whose death it fell to the crown: Robert II. gave it to John Lyon, his favourite, who, on marrying the king's second daughter, became the founder of the family of Lyon (now Bowes-Lyon). Earls of Strathmore, the eldest son of which bears the courtesy title of Lord Glamis: on the conviction and execution of the young and beautiful Lady Glamis for witchcraft, 17 July, 1537, the castle once more became royal property, and a residence of James V., but was afterwards restored to the family: it contains a valuable collection of pictures. Near the castle, on a pedestal, stand the figures of four lions rampant, life size, each holding a dial in the fore paws; from their heads rises a huge mass of stone, something like a pineapple in shape, with the protuberances upon it formed into dials, making in all eighty-four. In the manse garden stands a large stone obelisk, with carvings, said to mark King Malcolm's grave. Here is an Established church. The Episcopal church of St. Michael and All Angels, founded in 1688, is a private chapel, belonging to the Earl of Strathmore, and seats 65 persons; the chaplaincy is at present (1921) vacant. In the village is a Masonic Hall, which is also used for lectures and other purposes. Fairs are held on the first Wednesday in April, first Wednesday in May, first Wednesday after the 26th of May, first Saturday after the 28th of October, and first Wednesday after the 22nd of November. The Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne is the principal landowner. The area comprises 14,265 acres; rateable value, £12,710; population in 1911, 1,159.

CHARLESTON is a small village in the parish. Charleston and Glen Ogilvie abound with very valuable stone.

GLENISLA is a parish in the north-west of the county, extending 20 miles from north to south and about 6 in breadth; it is bounded on the west and south-west by Perthshire and on the east by the parishes of Cortachy, Kirriemuir and Lintrathen. The river Isla flows down the centre of the parish, and the kirktown stands on the left bank of this river, 10½ miles north from Alyth. The parish is in the poor combination of Dundee and small debt court district of Forfar. The district is mountainous, and in the northern portion contains the large deer forest of Caenlochan, near Tulchan. About 4 miles north-west of the village are the ruins of Fortar Castle, belonging to the Ogilvies, and destroyed by Argyll in 1640. The Earl of Airlie M.C. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 41,203 acres; rateable value, £11,246; population in 1911, 560 civil and 344 ecclesiastical.

INVERBROTHOCK, see ARBROATH.

INVERGOWRIE, which is now in Perthshire, will be found with the information in that County.

INVERKEILOR is a parish with a sea front of about 5 miles on Lunan Bay, and bounded north by the parishes of Lunan and Kinnell, west by Kirkden and Carmyllie and south by St. Vigeans; it runs inland for about 7 miles, and its kirktown is 5½ miles north of Arbroath; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, and has a station on the Arbroath and Montrose section of the North British railway. There are Established and United Free churches. The Lunan water runs through the northern part of the parish, and the Keilor burn through the south-eastern. On an eminence at the mouth of the Lunan river stands a venerable ruin, called "Red Castle," said to have been built by William the Lion, and used by him as a hunting seat. A short way to the south is the promontory of Redhead. The ridge of the coast at this point is very rocky and precipitous, being about 200 feet above the sea level. South-west of Redhead is Ethie House, the seat of the Earl of Northesk, and the residence at one time of Cardinal Beaton. About a mile from Ethie House, eastward, near the sea, stand the remains of St. Murdoch's chapel, formerly a cell of Aberbrothock. Kinblethmont, the seat of David C. Rutherford Lindsay-Carnegie, near the middle of the parish, is the King's Blyth Mont of Scott's "Antiquary." The Chapelton is near by, with ruins of a chapel where the Lindsays are buried. The Earl of Dalhousie, the Earl of Northesk, Mrs. Lindsay-Carnegie and David C. R. Lindsay-Carnegie esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 10,252 acres; rateable value, £14,550; population in 1911, 1,377 civil and 1,160 ecclesiastical.

KIRRIEMUIR

KIRRIEMUIR is a town of considerable antiquity, a burgh of barony, police burgh and capital of its parish, 62 miles north from Edinburgh, 18 north from Dundee, 6 west-north-west from Forfar and 5 north from Glamis; with a station which is the terminus of a branch line of the Caledonian railway from Forfar. The town is situated near the foot of the braes of Angus, on the south-west side of the hill, along the northern brow of a glen, through which flows the Gairie burn. The prospect from the lower part of the town is bounded by the southern braes of the glen, but from the higher part almost the whole of the Vale of Strathmore is visible. The town council consists of a provost, two bailies and six councillors: a justice of peace court is held when required. The date of the barony of Kirriemuir is unknown, and it is only certain that the jurisdiction of its bailie once extended over a large tract of country. The Earl of Home T.D. is superior of the burgh. For a long period Kirriemuir has been the seat of considerable manufactures, comprising almost every variety of jute, giving employment to about 1,000 persons. Here are two Established and three United Free churches, and a place of worship for Original Seceders. The Episcopal church of St. Mary the Virgin, built in 1905, has 250 sittings; the rectory, net value £260, has been held since 1899 by the Rev. John Anderson Philip M.A. of Aberdeen University. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Bank of Scotland. The principal hotels are the Ogilvy Arms and the Airlie Arms. The library belonging to the Kirriemuir Society for Reading and Recreation contains about 3,000 volumes, and is open to the public. There are Public and Good Templars' Halls, a Parochial Almshouse and a public park. The endowed seminary, erected and endowed from a bequest made in 1829 by Mr. John Webster, writer and banker, is now a public school. A golf club, was formed in 1909, at a cost of over £1,000. Two newspapers, "The Kirriemuir Observer" and "The Kirriemuir Free Press," are published weekly on Fridays. A little to the east of the town is the cemetery, situated on the sloping side of an eminence. Three miles to the north-east, within the boundary of the parish, over the small river Carity, stands the Castle of Inverquharity, formerly a stronghold of the Ogilvies, and still in a good state of preservation; 3 miles west are the ruins of Castle Balfour, erected by Cardinal Beaton. The principal seats are Kinnordy, the residence of Lord Lyell D.L., J.P.; Lindertis, the residence of Sir Thomas Torquil Alphonso Munro bart. and Logie, the residence of Robert Lyell esq. Fairs are held on the first Friday after the 28th of May and the 28th November. Lord Lyell is the principal landowner. The area of the parish is 15,000 acres; rateable value, £31,662; population in 1911, 5,391, of whom 3,776 are within the burgh and 13 in the Kirriemuir Almshouse (Poorhouse). Area of the burgh, 316 acres: rateable value, £35,300. The population of the ecclesiastical parish (parish church) in 1911 was 3,345, and of South Church ecclesiastical parish, 2,046.

LOCHEE, see DUNDEE.

LOCHLEE is a parish on the northern border of the county and extending 9 miles from north to south by 13 in breadth, and is 12 miles from Edzell station, on the branch from Brechin of the Caledonian railway; the parish is bounded on the west and north by the county of Aberdeen, east by the parish of Edzell and south by Lethnot and Clova, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Brechin; it is situated among the Grampians, a mountainous district, chiefly adapted for pasture, and bordering on the counties of Kincardine and Aberdeen. Some of the hills of this district vary from 2,000 to 3,000 feet above the sea level. The soil is light, and the crops are generally remunerative. The principal streams which traverse the parish are the Lee, the Mark and the Tarf, all tributaries of the North Esk, which enters the sea near Montrose. There are Established and United Free churches. The Episcopal Church of St. Drostan, built in 1880, will seat 143 persons. Invermark is the shooting lodge of the Earl of Dalhousie, who is the sole landowner. The area comprises 58,382 acres; rateable value, £6,872; the population in 1911 was 295.

Tarfside is a village 4½ miles to south-east of Invermark Lodge.

LUNAN is a small parish extending about 2½ miles from north to south, along the coast of Lunan Bay, by 2 miles in breadth; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath, from which it is 7 miles north and 4 south from Montrose, and has a station (Lunan Bay) on the Dundee and Montrose section of the North British railway; its northern boundary is formed by the parishes of Craig and Maryton, the west by Kinnell, on the south the Lunan water, which separates it from Inverkeilor, and on the east by the North Sea. Lunan Bay has a very picturesque coast line of about 3 miles from Red Head to the northern headland, the cliffs rising direct from the shore to 100 or 150 feet. Here is an Established church. About a mile to the north of Lunan house, and standing on high ground, is a monument in the form of an obelisk 45 feet in height erected in 1850 to the memory of Brigadier James Blair (d. 12 Aug. 1847), grandfather of the present proprietor; on a hill at the mouth of the river Lunan are the ruins of Redcastle, built, according to tradition, by William I. as a hunting seat. Major Hew F. Blair-Imrie C.M.G., O.B.E. Lord Lyell, representatives of the late Lt.-Col. J. E. E. Stansfeld D.S.O. John Tindal esq. Joseph Millar esq. Gavin Meikle esq. and William Abel Towler esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,857 acres; rateable value, £4,992; the population in 1911 was 312 civil and 238 ecclesiastical.

LUNDIE and FOWLIS are civil parishes and a joint ecclesiastical parish formed by the addition of Easter Fowlis to Lundie, in 1618, its boundaries being Liff and Benvie on the south-east, Auchterhouse on the north-east, Newtyle on the north and Kettins on the west; they are in the poor combination of Dundee and small debt court district of Forfar. Lundie is distant 9 miles north-west from Dundee. The nearest station is at Dronley, on the Dundee and Newtyle section of the Caledonian railway. There are two churches and both have been restored. In 1898 a stained window, designed by the late Sir E. Burne-Jones bart. was placed in the church of Lundie. In the churchyard lie the remains of Admiral Viscount Duncan, d. 4 August, 1804. The church of Fowlis was originally a Collegiate church, founded in 1149 by Sir Andrew Gray for a provost and prebendaries, and also contains a stained window erected in memory of John 16th Lord Gray, d. 31 Jan. 1867. The Earl of Camperdown and W. D. Graham Menzies esq. are the only landowners of Lundie. The area of Lundie is 4,185 acres; rateable value about £3,250; the population in 1911 was 256. The area of Fowlis Easter 2,823 acres; rateable value about £1,550; the population in 1911 was 249. The population of Lundie and Fowlis ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 505.

MAINS and STRATHMARTINE form a joint parish, with stations at Baldovan and Baldragon, on the Dundee and Newtyle section of the Caledonian railway, 3 miles north of Dundee; the parish is intersected by the river Dighty, and extends 3 miles from north to south by 5½ from west to east; it is bounded by the parishes of Dundee on the south, Murroes on the east, Tealing on the north and Liff and Auchterhouse on the west, and is in the Dundee small debt court district. In 1907 part of the landward portion of the parish was added to the city of Dundee. There are in the parish three Established and two United Free churches: the Episcopal Church of St. Luke, Strathmartine, built in 1903, will seat 200 persons: the Rev. H. L. Johnston M.A. has been priest in charge since 1920. Along the Dighty are several mills, and on the south-east the bleach ground of Claverhouse; the freestone quarries also afford employment to many of the inhabitants. The celebrated John Graham, Viscount Dundee, who was slain at Killiecrankie, 26 May, 1689, took his lairdship title of Claverhouse from a place in this parish. A Mental Hospital for the treatment of imbecile children, together with an orphan asylum, was founded at Strathmartine, in 1853, by Lady Jane Ogilvy, who died 28th July, 1861. A Celtic cross was erected in Strathmartine village in 1920, as a memorial to the men of the parish who fell in the Great War. Sir Herbert Kinnaird Ogilvy bart. John Sharp esq. David Erskine Erskine esq. John Grant esq. Thomas Pate esq. and the trustees of the late Thomas Cox esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,301 acres; rateable value, £17,908 (landward); the population in 1901 was 5,486, and in 1911, 6,737, of which 4,640 are in the Dundee burgh. Included in the landward population are 45 officials and their families and 263 inmates of Baldovan Mental Hospital. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,907.

MIDMILL is a village; population in 1901, 356.

DOWNFIELD, transferred to borough of Dundee in 1910 (except for ecclesiastical purposes), was formerly in Mains and Strathmartine parish; population in 1901, 1,480.

MONIFIETH is a parish and police burgh with a station on the Dundee and Arbroath joint railway, and likewise a station at Kingennie, on the Dundee and Forfar branch of the Caledonian railway. The parish lies on the shore of the Firth of Tay, extending about 4½ miles from north to south with a breadth of 1½ to 3½ miles, and is in the small debt court district of Dundee; it is bounded on the south by the Firth of Tay, on the east by the parishes of Barry and Monikie, on the north by Monikie and on the west by Murroes and Dundee. The town of Monifieth is situated about 2 miles east from Broughty Ferry and 5½ east from Dundee, on a brae with a southern exposure, and within a short distance of the sea, and was made a police burgh in 1895; it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors: it is lighted with gas from works belonging to the burgh, and supplied with water from the Dundee water works. There are machine works and foundries. The town contains an Established church and three United Free churches. There is also an Episcopal Mission church dedicated to the Holy Trinity; the Rev. J. Hampton Shepherd L.Th., M.A. of Pembroke College, Cambridge, has been priest in charge since 1918. The Cottage Hospital, erected in 1902, was built and endowed from funds left by the late Rev. J. Gerard Young D.D. and contains four beds; there is also a sanatorium under the management of the Dundee Public Health Committee. Seaview is the residence of William Low esq. J.P.; Linlathen, of David Erskine Erskine esq. J.P.; Laws House, of Frank Sandeman esq. and The Grange, of C. E. Gilroy esq Thomas Anderson esq. David C. Erskine Erskine esq. and Frank Sandeman esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,952 acres; rateable value, £31,744; population in 1901, 11,672 and in 1911, 13,145, of whom 9,132 were in the police burgh of Broughty Ferry and 3,098 in the police burgh of Monifieth. Area of burgh, 344 acres. The population of Monifieth ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 4,217.

The electric tramways of the Dundee, Broughty Ferry and District Tramways Co. Ltd. were extended from the Dundee boundary to Monifieth Dec. 27th, 1905, the cars running through from High street, Dundee, to High street, Monifieth.

MONIKIE is a parish, containing the village of Newbigging and the hamlets of Monikie and Craigton, the former 10 miles north-east from Dundee; it has a station on the Dundee and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway, and is 7 miles in length from north to south by 5 in breadth; the parish is in the small debt court district of Dundee, and is bounded on the south-east by Barry, south-west by Monifieth, west by Murroes, north-west by Inverarity, Panbride on the east, and north and north-east by Carmyllie. Reservoirs, forming part of Dundee water supply and covering about 120 acres, lie between Monikie station and the Craigton district; the fishing rights in these are in the hands of the Earl of Dalhousie. There are quarries of freestone, flagstone and whinstone in the parish. There are one Established and two United Free churches. About half a mile south of the parish church, on the hill of Downie, stands a monument 105 feet in height, erected in 1839, during the lifetime of the late Lord Panmure, by his tenantry. The Earl of Dalhousie, the Earl of Home, the trustees of the late John Shiell esq. and the trustees of the late Robert Sim esq. M.D. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 8,869 acres; rateable value, £20,570; population in 1911, 1,184.

MONTROSE

MONTROSE is a royal burgh and seaport, and a parish with stations on the Caledonian and North British railways, and is 72 miles N.N.E. from Edinburgh, 29 N.E. from Dundee, 23 S.S.W. from Stonehaven, 21 E. by N. from Forfar, 13 S.S.W. from Bervie, 12 N. from Arbroath and 8½ E. from Brechin. The North Sea, the rivers North Esk and South Esk, and a large expanse of water, 9 miles in circumference, filled by the tide at high water, and designated "Montrose Basin," constitute the site of the town a peninsula. It was anciently called "Celurca," but the derivation of its modern appellation, Montrose, is said to be from "moin" (marshy-land) and "ros" (a promontory): the town seal, however, bears the ornament of roses, with the motto "Mare ditat, Rosa decorat"—"the sea enriches, and the rose adorns," and two mermaids as supporters. Montrose is connected with many important events: in 980 the town was burned by the Danes, and many of its inhabitants killed. It is mentioned as the port from which Sir James Douglas embarked, in 1330, with a numerous and splendid retinue, on a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, taking with him the heart of Robert Bruce. It also frequently appears in history in connection with the wars of the Covenanters, and was sacked by the Royalists under Irvine of Drum in 1644. During the rebellions of 1715 and 1745 it was the head quarters of the rebels in Angus, and at its Mercat Cross the Chevalier was proclaimed by the Earl of Southesk in 1715. This was the first port made by the French fleet in December, 1715, with the Chevalier on board; and the Prince embarked at the same place in the month of February of the following year, accompanied by the Earl of Mar, the Earl of Melfort, Lord John Drummond, Lieut.-General Sheldon and a number of other gentlemen. It is distinguished as the first place in Scotland where the Greek language was taught, and at its seminary the celebrated scholar Andrew Melville was educated. James Graham, 1st Marquess of Montrose, The Royalist commander, was born here in 1612, and the house in which he was born, although considerably altered, still stands, and was for some years occupied as an inn. In the same house the old Pretender spent his last night in Scotland. Part of it is still used as a private dwelling-house, and is known as the Castlestede. This town is also celebrated as the birth-place, in January, 1777, of Joseph Hume, the statesman, who represented Montrose for a number of years in the British Parliament, and to whose memory a monument has been raised in High street; in the same street is a statue of the Rt. Hon. Sir Robert Peel bart. P.C., M.P. Robert Brown F.R.S. the eminent botanist, was born here 21 Dec. 1773; Paul Chalmers, artist, & Sir James Duke bart. Lord Mayor of London, 1848-9; Lieut.-Gen. Sir Alexander Burnes kt. the diplomatist, massacred at Cabul, in 1841; Sir William Burnett K.C.H., M.D., F.R.S. of the Royal Navy, and Dr. William Hunter F.R.S. the learned Orientalist, were all natives of the burgh. The title of Duke of Montrose was bestowed by James III. in 1488, on David Lindsay, 5th Earl of Crawford, and this appears to have been confirmed to him in 1489 by James IV., but his successors did not assume the ducal title, which is now held by the family of Graham, created Earls of Montrose in 1504-5, who derived their title from their lands at Alt or Upper Montrose, now commonly called Old Montrose, although they do not now own any land in the parish.

The erection of Montrose into a royal burgh has generally been referred to the year 1352, in the reign of David II., but there is good reason for believing that the first charter emanated from David I. The parish and burgh of Montrose has been added to by the transfer of Rossie Island from the parish of Craig, under a Secretary of Scotland's order, which came into force December 6, 1898. The municipal government is vested in the provost, three magistrates, dean of guild, hospital master, treasurer and 12 councillors. The town is protected by a body of police, under the superintendence of the Town Council. A police court is held when requisite, a justice of the peace court on the first Monday in each month, and a sheriff court on the third Friday in the months of January, March, May, July, September and November; the two last mentioned courts are for adjudicating small debt claims. The burgh, united to those of Forfar, Brechin, Arbroath and Inverbervie, forms the Montrose parliamentary district, constituted under the Reform Act of 1832, and returning one member.

The town was first lighted by electricity in 1901.

The High street of Montrose, a broad thoroughfare, was widened in 1736 by the removal of a row of old thatched houses, which extended from the North fort to the Castle gate. The Town House, in High street is a plain building of two storeys, with an arcade below, erected in 1763, and here also is the guildhall, built in 1819. Passage across the river in olden times was obtained by a ferry boat, which plied between Ferryden and the Ferry-boatness. This is still continued, but the traffic was greatly diverted by a timber bridge erected in 1791 between the island of Inchbrayock and the Constable hill. This bridge was pulled down in 1827, and the South Esk is now crossed by a fine suspension bridge, erected in 1828-9, from a design by Capt. Brown R.N. at an expense of upwards of £20,000. The distance between the points of suspension is 432 feet, and the total length, including the approaches, is 800 feet. The river at the bridge has 35 feet of water at spring tides and 20 feet at low water in ordinary tides, and during the ebb it frequently runs at the rate of six miles an hour. The harbour, formed by the river and an arm of the sea, is very commodious and a safe asylum for vessels. Two lighthouses, one on each bank of the South Esk, mark the entrance of the river, while a tower, called the "Scurdyness," on the rock at the south entrance, provides another light. In the keeper's house provision is made for the reception and recovery of persons who have suffered shipwreck, and attached are two lifeboats. The quays are all on the Montrose side of the river, and have been considerably extended. The custom house at the port is now only a branch under the Dundee district. There is also a wet dock. In 1893 the Corporation purchased the island of Inchbrayock (or Rossie Island), in the middle of the river South Esk, which is now in the boundary of the burgh. The number of sailing and steam vessels entered under Part I. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port, December 31st, 1918, was 18 of 664 tons. Fishing boats registered under Part IV. of the same were 156 of 1,672 tons. The shipping trade includes flax, corn, straw, timber, coal and cured fish. The value of the principal articles imported in 1919 amounted to £19,281. The exports amounted to £173,468 in 1919, of which £172,487 was raw potatoes. The principal manufactures consist of flax and jute spinning, but there are various other branches of trading industry, notably fish curing, carried on by Messrs. Joseph Johnston and Sons Limited, who are also the lessees of the salmon fishings on the seaboard, also the export of potatoes. The extent of the wood trade at this port deserves special mention. It is in the hands of the old and enterprising firm of Messrs. Robert Millar and Sons Limited who export large quantities of dressed timber to Australia &c. Shipbuilding is carried on to a small extent, and there is a patent slip for repairs. There are six branch banks and a savings bank. The principal hotels are the Central, the Star and the Bents. The Central is large and newly built, and is fitted with all modern conveniences. The Star hotel has been long established, and in all respects affords excellent accommodation. The Downs or Links, situated between the town and the sea, are the most extensive of any in Scotland, and include three well laid out golf courses, comprehending a circuit of several miles, finely formed by nature and free to the public at all times for golf as well as for cricket. A large portion of the front Links has been tastefully laid out as public gardens, and contains a bowling green and fountains. There is an assembly room and numerous charitable, educational, scientific and social institutions. Two newspapers are issued weekly, viz.: the "Review" and the "Standard."

The parish church, founded in 1791, has a lofty tower with spire, reaching to a height of 220 feet: the church will seat 2,500 persons. There is also the Melville parish church, five United Free churches, Roman Catholic and other churches. The Episcopal church of St. Mary and St. Peter, built in 1878, will seat 365 persons. The Rev. Hubert M. Rankin M.A. has been rector since 1917. The public charities of Montrose are very numerous, the principal being a sum of £3,000, left in 1786 by John Erskine, of Jamaica, for the support of the grammar school, and since 1888, under the management of the Educational Endowment Trust. Another important charity is the ancient Hospital Fund, administered by the Town Council. The relief from this charity is distributed among about 144 persons, not being paupers. The Royal Mental Hospital, at Sunnyside, incorporated by Royal Charter in 1810, was first instituted in 1871. The present buildings, situated about 2½ miles from the town, consist of a main block, opened in 1859, for between 400 and 500 patients, store rooms and a new laundry, built in 1877, a spacious dining-room and recreation hall, erected in 1882, and a hospital for the sick and infirm insane, built during the period 1888-91, and available for over 100 patients. A private mental hospital, named "Carnegie House," after the foundress of the institution, was completed in 1899 at a cost of £25,000, and has 60 patients. Two new villas were erected in the grounds in 1909, to provide for 60 male and 60 female patients. The Royal Infirmary and Dispensary, in Bridge street, was opened in 1839, and was incorporated with the asylum till 1913, when it obtained a charter of its own and is now under separate management. The Infectious Diseases Hospital, situate on the Links, was erected in 1909 for 20 patients. The Academy is a handsome building, surmounted by a dome, and there are many other educational establishments, and numerous societies, both religious and benevolent. The Free Public Library, in Castle place, erected in 1905 at a cost of about £9,000, is an edifice of brick and stone, and contains a general reading room, ladies' and juveniles' reading rooms, reference library and a lecture hall with librarian's house attached; there are 15,085 volumes in the lending and 2,801 in the reference department, among which is a very valuable collection (831 volumes) of local literature. There is a Burns collection (140 volumes) in course of formation. Another library, in Museum street, was instituted in 1785, and contains over 30,000 volumes. This was the first library in Scotland to introduce the open access system. The Museum, founded in 1837, is in Panmure place. The market is held on Friday, and hiring fairs are held on the Friday after Whit-Sunday and Martinmas. The parish of Montrose encloses an area of 4,232 acres; rateable value landward, £15,488. The population of the civil parish in 1911 was 12,669, viz.: burgh, 10,974; on Rossie Island, 185; landward, 1,695. Included in the total population, 125 officials and 683 inmates of the Montrose Royal Mental Hospital, and 78 inmates and 7 officials in Dorward House of Refuge, and 10 inmates in Montrose Almshouse (Poorhouse). The area of the burgh is 1,539 acres; rateable value, £56,606; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 8,417.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register for the year 1920 was 6,185, and in the entire district of Burghs, 25,208.

At DUBTON is the junction station for Montrose, on the Scottish North-Eastern section of the Caledonian railway.

HILLSIDE, which forms a suburb, is a quoad sacra parish in the parish of Montrose, about 2 miles distant from the burgh, and contains an Established church. The North British railway has a station here. Population in 1911, 1,722.

MELVILLE is a quoad sacra parish formed from Melrose, and has an Established church. Population in 1911, 2,245.

MURROES is a parish, the kirktown of which is 6 miles north-east of Dundee; the nearest railway station is at Kingennie, 1 mile east, on the Dundee and Forfar section of the Caledonian railway; the parish is bounded by Inverarity and Monikie on the north, Mains and Tealing on the west, Dundee and Mains on the south and Monifieth on the east and in extent is about 4 miles from east to west by 3 north to south; it lies on the road from Brechin to Dundee, and is in the small debt court district of Dundee. The greater part consists of arable land, but there are several quarries. There is an Established church, and remains of castles at Pourie and Ballumbie. Charles Barrie Ovenstone J.P., H.M. Board of Agriculture, Major A. F. Cox, Lt.-Col. Walter T. J. Scrymsoure-Stewart-Fothringham D.L., J.P. Henry Scrymgeour-Wedderburn esq. F. and G. Batchelor and Harold Bowman Gilroy esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,098 acres; rateable value, £11,624; population in 1911, 898 civil and 773 ecclesiastical parish.

Letters received through Dundee. The nearest post office is at Kingennie & money order & telegraph office at Broughty Ferry, 4 miles distant

NEVAY, see EASSIE.

NEWBIGGING, see MONIKIE.

NEWTYLE is a parish and village, the latter being on the road from Dundee to Meigle (in Perthshire), 11 miles north-west from the former town and 2½ south from the latter, with a station on the Dundee, Newtyle and Coupar-Angus section of the Caledonian railway; the parish extends 2 miles from north to south by 3½ in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Eassie and Nevay, west by Perthshire, south by Kettins and Lundie and east by Auchterhouse, and is in the poor combination of Dundee and in the small debt court division of Forfar. The Established church, erected in 1872 upon the old site, at a cost of £3,000, is in the Transition Norman style, with a tower 83 feet in height, containing a two-dial clock: the church affords 600 sittings. The United Free church was erected in 1901, has a peal of tubular bells and an organ: there are sittings for 225 persons. The Public Hall is managed by a board of trustees, Andrew Whitton, of Couston, treasurer; and there is a public library. The Public Park, gifted by Sir Charles William Cayzer bart. has bowling green, tennis courts and a pavilion. A nine-hole golf course is laid out on the slopes of the Sidlaws. The Home of Rest for Working Girls from Dundee, instituted in honour of the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, occupies premises known as "Bannatyne House," purchased from the Earl of Wharncliffe, and vested in trustees, for 40 girls. Near the village are the remains of the castle of Hatton, built by Lawrence, Lord Oliphant, in the year 1575; and contiguous to these ruins some vestiges are visible of the still more ancient castle of Balcraig. Sir Charles William Cayzer bart. Andrew Whitton esq. J.P. and the representatives of John Wilson esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,195 acres; rateable value, £14,778; population in 1911, 840.

PANBRIDE is a parish 5 miles south-west of Arbroath, on the coast of the North Sea, and contains a portion of the town and burgh of Carnoustie, besides the villages of Panbride, Muirdrum and East and West Haven, having stations on the Dundee and Arbroath Joint railway at Carnoustie and at East Haven; the parish extends 4½ miles from south-east to north-west by 2 in breadth, and is bounded on the south and south-west by Barry and Monikie, north by Carmyllie and north-east by Arbirlot; it is in the small debt court district of Arbroath. The Monikie burn runs through two-thirds of the length of the parish. At Panmure is a stone said to mark the grave of a Danish chieftain. The inhabitants are principally engaged in fishing and agricultural pursuits. There is an Established church. The village of MUIRDRUM is in this parish, and lies 1¾ miles north of Carnoustie; the Earl of Dalhousie is proprietor. There are also in the parish the villages of WESTHAVEN and NEWTON OF PANBRIDE, both forming part of Carnoustie, and divided from it by the Lochty burn. At the fishing villages of East and West Haven are two open harbours. Panmure House, the property of the Earl of Dalhousie, but now (1921) unoccupied, is a fine mansion, the prominent feature of which is a tower 80 feet high, with angle turrets, built in 1852; a large well-wooded park surrounds the house. The Earl of Dalhousie is the principal landowner. The area comprises 6,104 acres; rateable value, landward, including villages, £11,763; burgh, £8,072; the population in 1911—civil parish, 1,806; the numbers in the police burgh of Carnoustie being 1,051. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,713.

TEALING is a parish lying south of the Sidlaw range of hills, its kirktown being 6 miles north of Dundee; the parish is 4 miles in extent from east to west by a breadth varying from 1 to 4½ miles, and is bounded north and north-east by Inverarity, east and south-east by Murroes, south by Mains and Strathmartine and west by Auchterhouse and north-west by Glamis; it is in the small debt court district of Dundee. In this parish are found grey slate, moorstone and freestone. John Glass, founder of the sect designated "Glassites," and born at Dundee 21 Sept. 1698, was educated at St. Andrews, and subsequently became minister of Tealing previous to his deposition by the Church of Scotland; in England his followers were called "Sandemanians," from Robert Sandeman, who married Glass's daughter and became an elder in the sect; Glass died at Dundee in 1773. There are Established and United Free churches. Walter T. J. Scrymsoure-Steuart-Fothringham esq. J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 7,036 acres; rateable value, £5,967; population in 1911, 588 civil, 602 ecclesiastical.

GALLOWAY

THIS is an ancient district in the south-west of Scotland, including the present counties of Kirkcudbright and Wigtown. The family of Stewart, Earls of Galloway and Barons Garlies, take their title from this district, and it also gives a name to the second diocese in the united diocese of Glasgow and Galloway.

HADDINGTONSHIRE,

OR EAST LOTHIAN, lies on the southern side of the entrance to the Firth of Forth, its north-western border being bounded by that estuary and its north-eastern by the North Sea, its northern angle lying due south from Crail and Fifeness, on the opposite shore of the Frith, Berwickshire bounding it on the south and Edinburghshire on the west. From east to west it extends 26 miles; from north to south, at the middle, 16; at the east end it is not more than 10 miles across, and at the west end about 12; its area comprises 170,971 acres of land and 360 of water. The population in 1901 was 38,665 and in 1911, 43,254, viz.:—Males, 21,463; females, 21,791. The number of inhabited houses in 1901 was 8,398, and in 1911, inhabited, 9,416; uninhabited 1,050; building 53. In extent this is the twenty-fifth, and in population the twenty-second of counties in Scotland.

Early History.—Forming part of the Pictish kingdom in 81, it fell under the dominion of the Romans, and for nearly 3½ centuries formed part of their province of Valentia, until 410, when the Romans quitted the country, their departure being followed by a century of war, at the close of which, in 547, Ida, a Northman, managed to concentrate all the country from the Tees to the Forth under his sway; his grandson, Aethelfrith, was slain by Eadwine, Prince of Deira (or the country between the Tees and Humber), who then formed from these provinces the kingdom of Northumbria, bounded on the south by the Humber and north by the Forth, which continued as an appanage of England under kings or earls until 1057, when the portion north of the Tweed was incorporated into the kingdom of Scotland under Malcolm II. This county, with Edinburghshire, Linlithgow, and parts of Stirling and Roxburghshire, formed the district known as Lothean or Loudian, which suffered severely from English forays, notably those under Edward I., 1296; Edward II., previous to Bannockburn; Edward III., 1356; Richard II., 1385. Bothwell owned its strongest fortress, Dunbar, and thither he brought Queen Mary in 1567; Cromwell also concentrated his army at Dunbar in 1650, to be near his supplies, and at Doonhill defeated Major-General David Leslie; in 1745, when Prince Charles Edward, out-flanking and out-marching General Cope, entered the capital, Cope brought his forces by sea to Dunbar, and on the morning of the 22 September lay encamped on the level ground near the shore by Bankton House, in the parish of Prestonpans, when in the misty morning the small Highland army appeared on the hills towards Tranent, and swooping down on the English sent Cope to carry the news of his own defeat to the governor of Berwick. The old title of Earl of Dunbar is extinct, but those of Baron Blantyre, Earl of Haddington, and Baron Belhaven still remain.

Soil and Surface, Produce and Manufactures.—In point of soil, cultivation and produce, this county holds the first rank in Scotland, and in some of these respects, particularly the mode of husbandry, it will bear comparison with the most favoured districts in England. The principal elevations in Haddingtonshire above the level of the sea are Traprain Law, 724 feet; North Berwick Law, 612 feet; Soutra Hill, 1,209 feet; Spartleton Hill, 1,534 feet; Gilston, 1,362 feet, and Mickle Says Law, 1,750 feet. The range of the Lammermuir hills occupies the south of the county, which may be divided into four districts. The northern is a sloping tract of land, with a fertile soil; south of this is a ridge of ground north of the Tyne, descending partly towards that river and partly towards the coast land, and comprehends a good proportion of the arable land of the county; the third tract is varying in breadth, elevated above the midlands, and continuing along the base of the Lammermuir hills, nearly the whole extent of the county; the fourth comprises this extensive range of mountains, commencing at the south-west extremity of the shire and terminating on the Berwickshire coast, by the high promontory called St. Abb's Head; the greater part of this tract is moor, but between the hills are lands under a regular rotation of crops. Excellent gardens and orchards flourished in this county as early as the 12th century, and pulse seems to have been cultivated here in the 13th; the latter circumstance is attested by the fact of the English soldiers, during their siege of Dirleton Castle, having subsisted on the peas which grew in the adjacent fields. The fertility of East Lothian in the 17th century is ascertained by a passage in "Whitelock's Memoirs," where it is stated that the soldiers who accompanied Cromwell in his expedition into Scotland in 1650, were astonished to find in that district "the greatest plenty of corn they ever saw."

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," were:—Oats, 18,073 acres; barley, including bere, 17,702; wheat, 4,050; beans (to be harvested as corn), 142; peas, 108; total of all corn crops, 40,112 acres; turnips and swedes, 13,502 acres; potatoes, 7,959; mangolds, 287; cabbage, 504; rape, 439; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 150; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 10,631 acres; pasture (not for hay), 14,307 acres. The total area of the county is 170,971 acres of land, of which 43,611 were mountain and heath land (used for grazing), 21,105 permanent grass, and 88,872 arable land.

The live stock in 1920 consisted of 2,929 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 536; other horses, 319; cows in milk, 1,756; cows in calf, but not in milk, 200; heifers in calf, 315; bulls, 157; other cattle, two years and above, 3,157; one year and under two, 2,013; under one year, 1,183; total, 8,781; ewes kept for breeding, 39,824; rams, 1,207; other sheep, one year and above, 21,590; under one year, 48,320; total, 110,941; sows kept for breeding, 284; other pigs, 1,655.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 67; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 76; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 44; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 28; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 25; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 16; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 32; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 100; exceeding 300 acres, 170; total, 558.

The manufactures of this county are unimportant, and are carried on but to a limited extent; there are two woollen mills in the neighbourhood of the county town, whilst in other parts of the shire are brick and fireclay tile works, agricultural implement works, breweries and a distillery. Salt is manufactured in the vicinity of Prestonpans, coal also being wrought here and at Tranent, Ormiston and Pencaitland. So long ago as 1200, it is said, the monks of Newbattle worked a seam of this mineral at Prestongrange. Limestone is common over the county, and clay and sandstone are to be found. The climate in the Lowlands is on the whole genial and favourable for agriculture, whilst in the Lammermoor district it is colder and more liable to falls of rain and snow. The production of coal in the county in 1919 was 967,241 tons, value £1,271,507, and of fireclay, 19,006 tons; igneous rock, 15,517 tons; limestone, 19,770 tons. The number of persons employed in mines and quarries in 1919 was, underground, 3,417; above ground, 956; total, 4,373.

Rivers &c.—Several streams intersect the county, but none of them merit the title of river except the Tyne, which, passing from Ormiston on the south-west by Haddington, falls into the sea at Tynninghame, where it forms a bay; the White Adder, Monynut and Eye rivers take their rise in the south of the county. The only railway in the county is the North British, which, entering the county a little north-west of Cockburnspath, runs close to the coast as far as Dunbar, thence turning westward it proceeds through Prestonkirk to Drem, where a branch goes north to North Berwick, and running to Longniddry it sends a branch south-east to Haddington and another north-east to Gullane and passes out of the county near Inveresk, from which place a branch passes through Ormiston to Macmerry, and from Ormiston through Saltoun to Gifford. The southern portion of the county does not posses any railways.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Haddington comprises 24 civil parishes and 25 ecclesiastical parishes and parts of 2 others, the whole being included within the presbyteries of Haddington, Dunbar and Dalkeith, in the synod of Lothian: Haddington, Dunbar and North Berwick are royal burghs; these, with Lauder (in Berwickshire) and Jedburgh (in Roxburghshire) formerly joined in sending one member to Parliament, but by the "Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885," were included in their respective shires. The Police burghs are Cockenzie and Port Seton, East Linton, Prestonpans and Tranent. The counties of Berwick and Haddington, inclusive of all the burghs situated therein, under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," return one member to Parliament. The parliamentary constituency for 1919 numbered 33,898.

ABERLADY is a parish and village, in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of Haddington; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Dirleton, east by Haddington, south by Gladsmuir and west by the Firth of Forth; the village, which lies on the south side of Aberlady Bay, has a station on a branch line (opened in April, 1898) from Longniddry to Gullane, of the North British railway, and is 15 miles east from Edinburgh. James VI., by charter, erected this parish into a temporal barony, which grant, it is said, was confirmed by Charles I. in 1663, but the privileges or immunities conferred thereby are now in abeyance. The parish church, rebuilt in the Gothic style, retains the ancient tower of the original church: there is also a United Free church. Bishop Gavin Douglas, of Dunkeld (d. 1522), granted to this parish the estate of Kilspindie, and the ruins of the house attached to it are still to be seen. There is a fine old market cross, also an ancient "louping-on stane." A monument has been erected in memory of the local men who lost their lives in the war in South Africa (1899-1902), and there is a memorial plot in memory of the men of the parish who fell in the Great War (1914-1918). About half a mile distant on the north-east is Luffness, a mansion belonging to the trustees of the late Lt.-Col. George Everard Hope, originally built in 1549, as a fortification, by the French general, De Thermes, as a protection against the garrison of Haddington, then in the possession of the English; near by stands the ruins of a Carmelite monastery founded by Patrick, 8th Earl of Dunbar, in 1286. The Earl of Wemyss and March, lord-lieut. who is the principal landowner, resides at Gosford House, nearly a mile south-west of the village; the mansion is surrounded by fine grounds, and contains a valuable collection of paintings. The area comprises 4,927 acres; rateable value, £13,297; the population of the parish in 1891 was 1,063, including 505 in the village, in 1901 950, with 442 in the village, and in 1911 963.

ATHELSTANEFORD is a parish and village in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Dirleton, south and west by Haddington, and south and east by Prestonkirk; the village lies 5½ miles south from North Berwick, and 2 south-east from Drem station on the Dunbar and Edinburgh section of the North British railway; there is another station at East Fortune. Here is an Established church. In the early part of the 18th century, two men of eminent poetical genius—John Home, author of the tragedy of "Douglas," born at Ancrum, 22 Sept. 1722, and Robert Blair, born in 1699, and author of "The Grave," were successively ministers here. The manse occupied by the first mentioned stood opposite the present modern manse, near the west end of the churchyard, and the site is now comprised in the garden, where an apple tree is pointed out as having stood close to the window of the poet's study. On resigning his pastorial charge, which he did about 1756, Home retired to a mansion in the neighbourhood, and died 4 Sept. 1808: Blair died here 4 Feb. 1747, and in the centre of the village is a monument to his memory. The area comprises 5,061 acres; rateable value, £10,342; the population in 1911 was 666.

DREM is a small village in this parish.

BELHAVEN see DUNBAR.

NORTH BERWICK is a parish, seaport town, royal burgh and popular seaside resort, in the East Lothian poor combination; the town is the head of a sheriff district and small debt court, and up to 1885 was one of a group of 5 parliamentary burghs, when the representation was merged into the county; the boundaries of the parish are Dirleton on the west, Prestonkirk on the south, Whitekirk on the south and east, and the Firth of Forth on the north; the town stands on a bay, and is 23 miles east from Edinburgh, with a terminal station on the Drem and North Berwick branch of the North British railway. The town is lighted with gas from works the property of the Corporation, and is supplied with water by gravitation from works erected at a cost of over £70,000, the source of the supply being in the Lammermuir hills, about 14 miles south of the town. The beach affords excellent bathing facilities, and near the harbour is an open air swimming pond. There are golf links at the east and west ends of the town, each with a course of 18 holes. The harbour, which is small, is formed by a tolerably good pier, but the rocks at the entrance allow only small vessels to enter; these can ride here in perfect safety, the harbour being boomed. North Berwick was erected into a royal burgh in 1363-1366 by a charter of King David II. and it appears to have been at that time a place of some trade. As a port it dates from the time of Robert II. and was one of the seventy royal burghs in existence at the time of the Union in 1707. James VI. granted to it in 1568 a new charter confirmatory of all its former privileges. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and five councillors. The sheriff's small debt court is held on the fourth Wednesday in January, and the second Wednesday in May and July and on the first Wednesday of October. The churches are an Episcopal, an Established, two United Free and a Roman Catholic. Fidra roads, about 2 miles to the west, are considered a very safe anchorage. In the offing are several bleak islets, only of value as rabbit warrens, and 3 miles to the east, within 2 miles of the coast, is the Bass Rock, which is a mile in circumference, and rises 350 feet above the surface of the sea; the channel betwixt it and the land is very deep, and is frequently taken by steam vessels. The Bass is inaccessible on all sides except by a narrow pass on the south-west toward the land. A caverned passage penetrates through the rock from east to west, which may be explored at low water. Commanding the landing place are the remains of a small fortification, which at one time was of considerable strength, and could then only be reached by ladders, or a bucket and chain; it existed as a stronghold for a long period, was a state prison during the reign of the two Stuarts, and became distinguished in the early part of the reign of William III. for the persevering fortitude with which it held out against the new dynasty. A lighthouse was erected in 1907 on the Bass. The island is the resort of myriads of sea fowl, especially Solan geese. About 3 miles east of North Berwick are the interesting ruins of Tantallon Castle, referred to by Sir Walter Scott as the parting scene of Angus and Marmion, in his poem of "Marmion." Close to the railway station are the extensive remains of an abbey, said to have been founded by Duncan, Earl of Fife, who died in 1154, for a sisterhood of Cistercian nuns; and directly south of the town rises North Berwick Law, a conical hill, the summit of which is 613 feet above the level of the sea. At the Harbour stands a cross, erected in memory of Catherine Watson, who was drowned in the East Bay, 27 July, 1889, in attempting to save the life of a boy. Sir Hew Clifford Hamilton-Dalrymple bart. and Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 5,073 acres; rateable value, £58,225; area of burgh, 458 acres; the population in 1911 was 3,968, of whom 3,246 were in the burgh.

BLACKSHIELS, see HUMBIE.

BOLTON is a parish and small village, the latter 3 miles south-west from Haddington, at which is the nearest railway station. The parish, which is bounded north by Haddington, east by Yester, south by Humbie, and west by Salton, is in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of Haddington. The parish church is a building in a modern Gothic style, with a square tower. In the surrounding graveyard are many interesting old tombstones, and here the mother of Robert Burns, the poet, is buried. Close by the church is the Parish Hall, in front of which a very handsome war memorial is being (1921) erected. About the close of the 15th century the lands of Bolton were seized by the Hepburns, one of whom, John Hepburn, was executed, as the associate of the Earl of Bothwell, his chief, in the murder of Darnley. The principal seat in the parish is Eaglescarnie, the residence of Col. Willoughby Ewart Peel. The area comprises 3,101 acres; rateable value, £3,296; population in 1911 was 256, and is now a little over 260.

The nearest Post, Telegraph & Money Order Office is at Haddington, 3 miles distant

COCKENZIE and PORT SETON.

COCKENZIE is a fishing village and a quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Tranent, situated on the shore of the Firth of Forth, and on the road to North Berwick, 1 mile north-east from Prestonpans station on the Dunbar and Edinburgh section of the North British railway. This place forms a police burgh conjointly with Port Seton, at which place a harbour, built at a cost of £11,000, mainly subscribed by the fishermen and aided by £2,000 from the late Earl of Wemyss and March (d. 1883), was opened in Sept. 1880, by Lady Elcho, late Countess of Wemyss and March (d. 1896). The small harbour at Cockenzie was constructed by Mr. Cadell. The school and master's house were presented to the village. Here are salt works. The principal landowners are the Earl of Wemyss and March and the trustees of John Polson esq. The area of the burgh is 67 acres. Rateable value, £7,644; the population in 1911, including Port Seton, was 2,400, and in the ecclesiastical parish, 2,572.

DIRLETON is a parish and village, in the poor combination of East Lothian and small debt court district of North Berwick. The parish is in the north-western extremity of the county, on the shore of the Firth of Forth, North Berwick lying to the east and Aberlady and Athelstaneford to the south, and is 20 miles east-north-east from Edinburgh, 7 north from Haddington, 4½ north-east from Aberlady, and nearly 3 south-west from North Berwick, with a station about a mile to the south-east on the Drem and North Berwick branch of the North British railway. The village is seated at the head of a low meadow, which extends about a mile and a half towards the sea, and the houses nearly surround an extensive triangular green interspersed with trees. On the south side of this space stands the ruins of Dirleton Castle, which belonged in the 9th century to a noble family, named De Vallibus or De Vaux, from whom it was taken, after a tedious siege, by Edward I. in 1298. In 1650 it was reduced and dismantled by the parliamentary general Lambert. About the middle of the 15th century this castle and the estate bestowed the title of baron on the Halyburton family. The eventual heiress, Janet Halyburton, married William, 2nd Lord Ruthven, and her grandson, Lord Ruthven and Dirleton, was created Earl of Gowrie in 1581, but this title was forfeited in 1600. In 1646 Sir James Maxwell was created Earl of Dirleton, but the title became extinct on his death. From ancient documents it would appear that a collegiate church was founded here in 1444, by Sir Walter Halyburton, but little is known of its character or site. The parish church, which stands a little below the green, bears date 1661; it was considerably enlarged in 1825. A new school on a prominent site was opened in 1912. Archerfield is now (1921) unoccupied. Here is an 18-hole private golf course.

GULLANE is a quoad sacra parish formed from that of Dirleton, from which it is 2 miles west and near the western coast, with a station on the Gullane and Aberlady branch of the North British railway. At one time this was the capital of the parish to which it gave its name; but in 1612 the seat of worship was removed by Act of Parliament to Dirleton. The links in the vicinity are the resort of numbers of rabbits, and are farmed as a warren. There are three full 18-hole courses, which have now become a favourite resort with golf players, and the village is attracting summer visitors; in the centre of the village are the ruins of the ancient kirk, dedicated to St. Andrew. A supply of water from a bore and deep well producing 70,000 gallons per day was provided in 1896. Water is now obtained from a reservoir at Stobshields, managed by the County Western District General Water Supply. Here are Established, United Free and Episcopal churches. On the small island of Fidra, lying off the northern coast, are the remains of a building, which served the purpose of a lazaretto in times of severe plague, and also as a beacon, but a lighthouse has now been erected. A convalescent home in connection with the Edinburgh Royal Hospital for Children, occupies the house and grounds of Muirfield, left by the late Miss M. J. Meikleham. Fenton and Kingston are hamlets in the parish. Lieut.-Col. John Patrick Nisbet Hamilton Grant D.S.O., who is lord of the manor, and the trustees of Lieut.-Col. George Everard Hope are the principal landowners. The soil is fertile and produces excellent green crops; there are also some fine pastures. The area comprises 9,209 acres; rateable value, £35,038; the population of the civil parish in 1901 was 1,810, and in 1911, 2,062, including 4 on Fidra island, and 1,136 in the ecclesiastical parish. The population of Gullane in 1911 was 926.

DUNBAR (which includes Belhaven) is a seaport town, royal and police burgh, on the coast of the North Sea, with a station on the North British railway, 11 miles north-east from Haddington and 29 east from Edinburgh; it is the seat of a presbytery in the synod of Lothian, and is also a civil and ecclesiastical parish in the East Lothian poor combination, bounded south and east by Stenton and Spott, and west by Whitekirk. The town, which occupies a slightly elevated site, is considered a very healthy resort for invalids, and the principal street is a spacious thoroughfare. The Gas Works belong to the Corporation, and since 1896 a supply of good water has been obtained, from springs in the Lammermoor hills, at a cost of £3,000; in 1897 filtering works were begun on a site about 1 mile south of the town, and completed in 1899, the total cost being estimated at about £3,000. Dunbar was elevated to the rank of a royal burgh by David II. and its burghal privileges were confirmed and extended by James IV. and James VI. It was governed by a provost and three bailies, a treasurer, town clerk and chamberlain, with fifteen members of council. A modern Act of Parliament has limited the number of corporate officers to a provost, three bailies, a treasurer and seven councillors. The Castle covered a considerable extent of ground, but the date of its erection cannot be ascertained. Being the key to Scotland on the east border, it came to be regarded as a fortress of strategic importance, and was therefore often besieged. In 1296 it was taken by Edward I. and being held for the English in 1314 by Patrick, 10th Earl of Dunbar, Edward II. sought refuge in it after the battle of Bannockburn, quitting it by sea for Berwick. Its most memorable siege was in January, 1337-8, when the Countess of Dunbar, "Black Agnes," defended it for nineteen weeks against an English army under William (de Montacute), Earl of Salisbury. In Queen Mary's reign it was in possession of James (Hepburn), Earl of Bothwell, and when the Queen became his prisoner, near Linlithgow, in 1567, he took her to this fortress, and the associated lords accepting the surrender of Mary at Carberry Hill, 15th June of the same year, it was on condition that Bothwell left her and retired to Dunbar. The castle was subsequently demolished by order of the Scottish Parliament, and nothing but fragments are now visible, some portion having been destroyed during the progress of the excavations for Victoria Harbour. The old battery is now used as a casual sick ward. At Doonhill, near the town, was fought (3 Sept. 1650) the battle of Dunbar, when the Parliamentary forces, under Cromwell, Monk and Lambert, defeated the Scots, under Gen. David Leslie, who had incautiously deserted their strong position and descended to the lower ground. The parish church, in High street, erected on the site of the old kirk in 1819-21, at a cost of £8,000, is an edifice of dark red stone in the Perpendicular style, and has a square tower with pinnacles; in the church is a beautiful marble monument to Sir George Home, Earl of Dunbar K.G. and lord high treasurer of Scotland in the reign of James VI. who died at Whitehall, 29 Jan. 1611, and was here buried. In 1898 a semi-octagonal apse was added, the roof repaired and the interior thoroughly renovated at a cost of £4,500: there are 1,800 sittings: the church also contains a beautiful carved oak pulpit, erected by the congregation, at a cost of £500, as a memorial to the late Rev. James Kirk M.A. who died of wounds in France in 1918. There are also two united Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. Anne, built in 1876, and restored in 1892, affords 250 sittings: the incumbency has been held since 1905 by the Rev. R. D. Bruce M.A. of Worcester College, Oxford.

The Harbour here was formed by Oliver Cromwell, and a portion of it now constitutes the east pier of the present harbour, which, in 1820, was improved by the addition of a dry and graving dock, afterwards filled up and large stores erected upon the site. In 1842 the Victoria Harbour was constructed at the joint expense of the town and Fishery Board; twenty years later it was greatly extended and now occupies a space of about five acres, and is frequented by vessels and boats for fishing purposes. There is good crab fishing, lobsters are caught to some extent, and the produce is mostly dispatched to London. The chief exports are corn, fish and potatoes, and the imports coal and timber. The industries of Dunbar are now a diminishing quantity. There are several good hotels. A lighthouse was constructed in 1899 at East Barns. In High street are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Bank of Scotland, and in Delisle street is a branch of the British Linen Bank. Dunbar House, formerly the mansion of the Earl of Lauderdale, stands at the northern end of the main street; its grand front, facing the sea, consists of a semi-circular centre and two extensive wings. St. Catherine's Hall, at the south end, was opened Jan. 5th, 1872, and contains a spacious room, available for balls and concerts, and three large rooms, used by the Free Gardeners and Templars. The Burgh school, erected in 1878, consists of two wings, with a house for the master in the centre. In 1897 the Burgh and Lamer Street schools were amalgamated, and in 1904 a higher grade department was added, which is now recognised as a centre for the training of teachers. The market is held on Tuesday, and there is an annual fair on the first Tuesday in February. The soil is rich and dry, and produces crops as early as any in Scotland. The Duke of Roxburghe K.T., M.V.O. and Sir Victor Alexander Anthony George Warrender bart. M.C. are the principal landowners. The parish of Dunbar extends about 8 miles along the coast, and the area comprises 7,486 acres; rateable value, landward, £21,719; area of burgh, 584 acres; rateable value, £28,245; the population of the parish in 1911 was 4,830, which included 3,346 in the burgh and 1,071 in the Belhaven portion, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,759.

BELHAVEN is a village, included within the jurisdiction of the burgh of Dunbar, situated about a mile west from that town, at the head of a small bay, which in former times formed a good harbour. It gives the title of baron to a branch of the family of Hamilton, also barons Stenton. At a short distance are the remains of an ancient British cemetery. In the village, which is a quoad sacra parish erected from that of Dunbar, is a church in connection with the Church of Scotland, and also an Isolation Hospital, opened in 1901, and containing 22 beds. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 1,071.

EAST BARNS is a village in Dunbar parish, about 3 miles south-east from the town, and a little to the right of the road leading thence to Berwick. In this village is a school for the eastern district of the parish.

WEST BARNS, another part of the royalty of Dunbar, is about half a mile from Belhaven. In this village there is a manufactory for agricultural implements, and extensive maltings. A Public Hall was opened in 1901, and here also is the landward school of Dunbar.

GARVALD is a parish, in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded by the parishes of Morham and Whittinghame on the north and east, and by Yester on the west, and extends from near the centre of the county southward, among the Lammermoor hills, to the borders of Berwickshire. The village of Garvald, seated in a fertile valley on the banks of the small river Papana, which a little lower is called Biel water, is 22 miles east-south-east from Edinburgh, 8½ south-west from Dunbar, nearly 6 south-east from Haddington, 5 south from East Linton station on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway, and about 4 miles from Gifford station on the North British railway. Here are Established and United Free churches. Within the parish are fine arable lands and also sheep walks; and the district contains a number of remains of antiquity. Among the latter are the remains of the Nunnery of Nunraw, which have been restored and enlarged, and are now the property and residence of Lieut.-Col. Walter Wingate Gray D.L., J.P. The Marquess of Tweeddale is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,407 acres; rateable value, £11,089; the population in 1911 was 511.

GIFFORD, see YESTER.

GLADSMUIR is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded on the north-west by the south shore of the Firth of Forth, on the west by the parish of Tranent, on the south by Pencaitland and Salton, on the east by Haddington and on the north by Aberlady. The village of Gladsmuir is 4 miles west from Haddington, 3½ east from Tranent and 2 east from Macmerry terminal station on the North British railway. The parish church stands on the main road between Haddington and Tranent. George Heriot, the founder of the hospital at Edinburgh, is said to have been a native of this parish, and William Robertson D.D. author of a "History of Scotland," was minister here from 1743, but afterwards removed to Edinburgh, and d. 11 June, 1793. From the proximity of the hamlet of Gladsmuir to the scene of the battle of Prestonpans, that conflict was called by the Jacobite party "the battle of Gladsmuir."

LONGNIDDRY is a village, near the shore of the Firth of Forth, and has a junction station on the Dunbar and Berwick line. Macmerry, also a village, is on the western border of the parish; here is the terminus of the Ormiston branch of the North British railway.

PENSTON, a decayed colliery village, is 1 mile south-west of Gladsmuir, and 1 east from Macmerry railway station.

MACMERRY is a village in Gladsmuir parish.

SAMUELSON, on the left bank of the river Tyne, is also a village in the parish, 3½ miles south-west from Haddington.

The Earl of Wemyss and March and Lord Lamington G.C.M.G., G.C.I.E. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,034 acres; rateable value, £17,149; the population in 1911 was 1,433.

HADDINGTON,
WITH NUNGATE.

HADDINGTON, the county town of East Lothian, is a royal and police burgh, the seat of a presbytery, in the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and a parish in Inveresk poor combination, 17 miles east from Edinburgh, 38 north-west from Berwick-upon-Tweed, 11 west-by-south from Dunbar and 10 south from North Berwick, and has a terminal station of a branch line from Longniddry on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway; it is on the west bank of the river Tyne, which is here crossed by three bridges, giving access to the suburb of Nungate. The streets are spacious and are lighted with gas by a company formed in 1835. In 1893 the Longyester water supply to the burgh of Haddington was introduced at a total cost of over £6,000. The corporation of the burgh consists of a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and twelve councillors. The magistrates hold a court every Monday. A sheriff and commissary court sits every alternate Thursday, during the sessions; one for small debts every alternate Thursday, and a justice of peace court the second Tuesday of each month; a court of quarter sessions is held on the first Tuesday in March, third Tuesday in April, May and first Tuesday in August, and on the last Tuesday of October; and an adjourned quarter sessions on the second Thursday in January.

The Town Building, in the High street, has a tower with spire 185 feet in height, added in 1831, at a cost of about £1,500: the buildings comprise the burgh council room, and an assembly room. The County buildings at the west end of the town, erected at a cost of £5,470, contain sheriff and justice of the peace court rooms, with offices and jury and witness rooms.

The Post Office, in Court street, was erected in 1908 at a cost of £5,000.

Haddington is unquestionably of very ancient origin; for in a charter granted by Ada, the widow of Prince Henry (and mother of Malcolm IV. and William the Lion), dated 1178, she styled it "Meum Burgum de Haddington. The suburb called Nungate is approached across the Tyne by three bridges: the Waterloo bridge, of one arch, built in 1817; another bridge, ancient and narrow, of three small arches, and also by the Victoria bridge, built in 1900: this suburb derives its name from a nunnery, which stood about a quarter of a mile from the town, and in which a parliament was convened on the 7th of July, 1548, during the siege of Haddington, when consent was given to the marriage of the unfortunate Mary to the Dauphin of France, and to her being educated at that court. The street from the West Port to the Town House, now called Court street, was of old named "King street," no doubt from the King's palace being situated therein. It was here that Alexander II. first saw the light, having been born in the palace on the 24th of August, 1198. At the east end of Nungate stands the roofless ruin of St. Martin's church, which has been but little used since the Reformation. The town has suffered severely at different periods by conflagrations and inundations. In 1216 it was burnt by King John, and in 1244 it shared the same fate by accident. In 1358 whole villages were swept away by the overflow of the Tyne, the waters of which approached the monastery, but did no damage. The 4th October, 1775, is memorable for the rising of the Tyne to a height of eight feet nine inches, at which it continued for several hours, and a plate recording this occurrence is placed at the east corner of High street. John Knox, the reformer, born at Gifford, in 1505, received part of his education in this town. The trade of Haddington consists principally in agriculture produce; and it is also considered one of the leading grain marts of Scotland. There is a brewery, two iron foundries, a cloth mill and hosiery mill, two corn mills and two maltings. In the town are branches of the British Linen Bank, the Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the Royal Bank of Scotland.

The parish church, at one time the church of a Franciscan abbey, is supposed to have been erected about the 12th or 13th century. The nave, which is the only portion now used, was repaired in 1811, at a cost of nearly £6,000, and was further repaired in 1892: the eastern portion and the old square tower are in ruins. A pulpit, altar table, lectern and font were presented by the late Miss Aitchison, of Alderston. There are some good stained glass windows. In one corner of the edifice is the burial place of the Maitland family, Earls of Lauderdale, who for many generations possessed Lethington, or "Lennoxlove." The church of St. John, Newtonport, is now used as a parish hall. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church of Holy Trinity, built in 1770, and consecrated in 1815, will seat 300 persons. The Rev. William S. Jenkins M.A. is the present rector.

In the centre of the town is a monument to George, eighth Marquess of Tweeddale K.T., G.C.B. and Field Marshal, d. 1876, and at West Port is another to Robert Ferguson, of Raith, M.P. erected in 1843. To the west, along the Edinburgh road, stands the village of St. Lawrence House, at which place King James V. built and endowed a leper hospital; a chapel dedicated to St. Lawrence also once existed, but the exact spot has not been identified. The county Mental Hospital, opened in 1866, stands a short distance from the town. There is a free library, and law and subscription libraries. Neilson Park, opened in 1910, was presented to the burgh by George Neilson esq.; it comprises about 13 acres. The charities are numerous, and several societies and clubs have been established for various objects. The Knox Institute, erected in 1878, at a cost of £7,000, in memory of John Knox, takes the place of the Burgh School. It is a secondary or higher class school, and provides a first-class classical, scientific, mathematical and English education for children of the district; the buildings include a workshop for teaching woodwork, and the institute is also a centre for training junior students. The Haddington and Salton Agricultural Societies were united in 1819, and now form one of the most flourishing local associations in the kingdom, annually distributing in premiums about £300. The old bowling green, between Elm House and the Nungate bridge, is now used as a playground. The Corn Exchange, in Court street, was opened 29 Sept. 1854. The weekly market is held on Friday; the sale of oats commences at twelve, barley at twenty minutes past twelve, wheat at twenty minutes to one, and beans and peas at one o'clock. A fortnightly auction for the sale of live stock is also held every alternate Monday. A cattle fair is held in October, and the United East Lothian Agricultural Society hold their meetings here for the show of stock, implements, seed &c.; for the show of seed corn in February and October, of stock, poultry and implements in July, and roots in December. Two papers are published here weekly, the "Haddingtonshire Advertiser," with which is incorporated the "East Lothian Visitor" (Friday) and "Haddingtonshire Courier" (Friday). Lennoxlove is the property and residence of William Arthur Baird esq.; Stevenson House, of Lady Sinclair; Clerkington, of Mrs. James Johnstone Ford; Amisfield House unoccupied. The area of the parish comprises 12,254 acres; rateable value, burghal, £27,485; landward, £21,435; the population (1911), 5,424 and in the burgh 4,140. Included in the total population were 149 inmates and 32 officials and their families in the District Mental Hospital and 103 girls and 11 officials in the Christie Female Industrial Homes.

HUMBIE is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Haddington, with two stations (Salton and Humbie) on a branch line from Ormiston of North British railway; it is in the south-western part of the county, and is bounded by the parishes of Salton and Ormiston on the north, part of Bolton and Yester on the east, and Fala and Soutra on the west, and is chiefly on the slopes of the Lammermoor range of hills; the highest points being Blegbie hill, 1,336 feet, and Ninecairn Edge, 1,473 feet above sea level. Here are Established and United Free churches. The Children's Village is a home maintained here by the Edinburgh Children's Holiday Fund.

UPPER KEITH is a village in the parish, 2 miles from Humbie station and 5 miles north-east from Tynehead station on the Edinburgh to Hawick and Carlisle section of the North British railway.

BLACKSHIELS, a small hamlet in the detached portion of the parish, has been transferred for civil purposes to Fala, Edinburghshire.

The area comprises 8,797 acres; rateable value, £10,327; the population in 1911 was 679 in the civil parish and 708 in the ecclesiastical parish, of which 29 were in Edinburghshire.

INNERWICK is a parish and village, in East Lothian poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Dunbar; the parish is bounded by Oldhamstocks on the east, Spott and Dunbar on the west, the sea on the north, and Cranshaws and Longformacus (in Berwickshire) on the south; it measures 10 miles in length, by a breadth varying from 2 to 3. The village has a station, about a mile north-east, on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway, and is 30 miles east from Edinburgh, 14 east from Haddington, and 4 south from Dunbar, lying rather more than a mile to the west of the road leading from the latter town to Berwick. The Established church was built in 1784. In 1870 the interior of the church was thoroughly renovated. There is also a United Free church in the village. Thurston, about a mile west of the village, is the residence of James William Hunter esq. and about three-quarters of a mile to the south-east of Innerwick are the remains of a castle of that name standing on the summit of a rocky eminence, overhanging a woody glen, which divides the castle from the fortlet of Thornton. The castle, which originally belonged to the Hamiltons of Innerwick, was besieged, taken and destroyed, after an obstinate resistance, by the troops under the Duke of Somerset. The remains of several military encampments can be traced in the neighbourhood. A life-boat station was erected at SKATERAW in 1907. The Marquess of Tweeddale, the Board of Agriculture for Scotland, Lieut-Col. John Patrick Nisbet Hamilton Grant D.S.O. James William Hunter esq. and Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 13,424 acres; rateable value, £11,701; population in 1911, 676.

MORHAM is a small parish in the centre of the county, about 4 miles south-east from Haddington station on the North British line, and in the Haddington small debt court district; it figured largely in the time of Queen Mary, whose third husband, James, Earl of Bothwell, was proprietor of Mainshill. At that time there was a comparatively large village, which has, however, long ago disappeared, and the parish is now wholly agricultural. The parish church is a plain edifice of stone. Here also is a home for orphan boys, controlled by the Church of Scotland. The area comprises 2,086 acres; rateable value, £2,482; the population in 1911 was 199.

OLDHAMSTOCKS is a village, at the extreme east of the county, and near the shore of the North Sea, and is between 7 and 8 miles in length, by a breadth of about 2; it is bounded on the north-west, west, and part of the south by Innerwick, and by Cockburnspath on the east, and is in East Lothian poor combination, and small debt court district of Dunbar; the village stands in a valley on the road from Dunbar to Duns, 3 miles south-east from Innerwick and about 3 south-west from Cockburnspath station on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway. There is an Established church. Dunglass, a modern mansion near the coast, at present (1921) undergoing reconstruction, and the property and residence of Frank James Usher esq. is built on the site of Dunglass Castle, a fortress noticed in Scottish history; it was originally one of the many strongholds of the Earls of Home, and still confers the title of baron on that family. In 1640 the Earl of Haddington, and several others who had joined the Covenanters, took possession of the castle for the purpose of watching the garrison at Berwick. While here the Earl received a letter from General Leslie, and was standing in the court yard reading it to the company there assembled, when the powder magazine blew up, which, throwing down one of the side walls, overwhelmed his lordship, together with his auditors, who all perished in the ruins. The deed is said to have been perpetrated by one of the earl's faithless attendants, who ignited a barrel of gunpowder. The land is fertile on the sea coast, and rises gradually towards the Lammermoor Hills, which are chiefly pastural. The area comprises 7,397 acres; rateable value, £4,932; the population in 1911 was 404 civil and 450 ecclesiastical parish, of whom 46 were in Berwickshire.

ORMISTON is a parish and village, on the western border of the county: the parish is bounded on the north by the parish of Tranent, on the east by Pencaitland, on the south-east by Humbie and on the west by Edinburghshire, and is in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington: the village is in the northern part of the parish, 2½ miles south of Tranent, and consists of one spacious street, with a cross in the centre, and has a station on the Macmerry section of the North British railway. The parish church stands 1½ miles south-west of the village; there is also a United Free church and two public schools. The Rev. Robert Moffat D.D. the South African missionary, was born here 1796; he died in 1873, and a monument has been erected to his memory. The parish abounds in coal of excellent quality. Ormiston Hall, the property of the Marquess of Linlithgow, 1 mile south of the village, is now (1921) unoccupied. There are traces of a Danish camp on the summit of Dodridge Law, an eminence near the southern extremity of the parish. The Marquess of Linlithgow O.B.E. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 3,443 acres; rateable value, £12,079; the population in 1911 was 1,598.

PENCAITLAND is a parish and village near the western border of the county and is in Inveresk poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington, with a station (opened in 1901) on a branch line from Ormiston of the North British railway. The village is 2 miles east from Ormiston and 2½ north-west from East Saltoun, on the banks of the Tyne water, which runs in an easterly direction through the centre of the parish and is here crossed by a stone bridge. The district forms the easternmost limit of the great coal range of the Lothians: limestone and freestone also abound. The parish church is on the eastern side of the river. There is also a United Free church and the Trevelyan Temperance Memorial Hall. About half a mile north-west of the village is Winton Castle, an extensive and partly ancient mansion, formerly the residence of the Earls of Winton, previous to the attainder of the Seaton family in 1715; it is now the property and residence of Gilbert Francis Molyneux Ogilvy esq. Fountain Hall, the property of Sir George William Dalrymple Dick-Lauder bart. is a mansion erected about the 17th century, but now partly in a state of decay and occupied as farm premises. Tyneholm, the seat of James Reid esq. J.P. is also in this parish. Gilbert Francis Molyneux Ogilvy esq. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 5,975 acres; rateable value, £15,747; the population in 1911 was 1,273.

PRESTONPANS is a market town, burgh of barony, and police burgh and parish in Inveresk poor house combination and the small debt court district of Tranent, 9 miles east from Edinburgh, 14 south-west from North Berwick, 9½ west-north-west from Haddington and 3 east from Musselburgh; situated on the shore of the Firth of Forth, having a station on the Edinburgh and Dunbar section of the North British railway. The town consists principally of one long street running parallel with the Forth, and is much frequented during the bathing season by visitors from Edinburgh and different parts of the country. The harbour, situated a little to the westward of the town, and called Morrisons Haven, has a quay for shipping coal and the manufactures of the place, which comprise earthenware, fire-bricks, and other articles, made from fire-clay, common bricks, tiles and salt; the latter originated here at an early date, having been made by the monks in 1189. There is also a brewery and a soap works. The mines of coal in the neighbourhood are very rich; a seam is now being worked by the Summerlee Iron Co. Ltd. within 200 yards of the quay, and there is a stratum of fire-clay underlaid by ironstone. Coal is also being worked by the Edinburgh Collieries Limited in a rich seam which runs under the sea. Prestonpans received its charter as a burgh of barony in 1617, in favour of Sir John Hamilton, of Preston, which ancient village (Preston) is included with the eastern part of the town in the charter; a suburb called "Kuittle," or more properly "Cuthill," the western portion, also enjoys a charter, which was granted originally by the abbey of Newbattle; this division is possessed by Sir G. Grant-Suttie bart. who is also patron of the parish. In the main street is a monument to Thomas Alexander C.B. late director-general of the medical department of the British army. There are Established, United Free and Episcopal churches. The Public Library was erected in 1905 at a cost of £1,500, the gift of the late Andrew Carnegie esq. Schaw's Hospital, at Preston village, is an extensive building erected in 1831 in the Old English style, at an expense of nearly £3,000, out of funds bequeathed by Dr. Schaw, in 1781. The institution was first opened in 1784, in Preston House, which stood behind the present erection; it was founded for the education and maintenance of 21 boys, children of indigent parents, those of the name of Schaw, M'Neil, Cunningham and Stewart having a preference of entry. This trust has been modified at the instance of the Endowed Schools Commissioners; the money is now spent in bursaries open to the public schoo' children, in Haddingtonshire. The house is now occupied by Miss Mary Murray's Institution—an establishment for educating and training girls for domestic service. About 1½ miles to the eastward lies a hamlet called Meadow Mill, the site of the battle commonly known as Prestonpans, fought 21 Sept. 1745, between Prince Charles Edward and Gen. John Cope and the English troops, which had been collected to oppose the Pretender's advance south; the Highland army, marching from Duddingston, bivouacked at Tranent on the night of the 20th September, 1745, and in the early morning of the 21st were conducted in a mist by a path from Tranent to Cockenzie, which avoided the morass and enabled them to surprise the English, whose cavalry fled from either flank, leaving their infantry to be cut up by the Highlanders, who drove the survivors in a confused rout to the gates of Berwick, capturing guns, military chest, baggage &c. Col. James Gardiner, whose residence (Bankton House) still stands close to the battlefield, was killed on the field and interred in Tranent church, and a monument has been erected to his memory. Preston Grange is the residence of Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. Preston Tower, in this vicinity, formerly the seat of the Hamiltons of Preston, is now a ruin. Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. the Schaw bequest, Messrs. John Gillies, Prestonpans Limited, and the McNeil trustees are the principal landowners. The area comprises 1,299 acres; rateable value, 1920, £47,013 (landward part); area of the burgh, 41 acres; rateable value, £8,379, making a total of £55,392; population in 1901, 3,382, and in 1911, 4,722, including 1,923 in the burgh.

SALTON (or Saltoun) is a parish, in Inveresk poor combination, and small debt court district of Haddington; it lies chiefly in a fertile valley on the north side of the Lammermoor Hills, bounded on the north, west and south by the Tyne and Salton rivers, and on the east by the parishes of Bolton and Haddington, and contains the villages of East and West Salton, with a station (opened in 1901) on a branch line of the North British railway, 1½ miles from East Salton and half a mile from West Salton. The village of East Salton is 15 miles south-east from Edinburgh, 5 south-west from Haddington and about 4 south-east from Winton station on the Macmerry section of the North British railway. The parish church, almost entirely rebuilt in 1805, is a cruciform edifice consisting of chancel, nave, transept and a tower and spire 90 feet high. Gilbert Burnet, Bishop of Salisbury 1689-1715, had Salton for his first benefice (1665), and for four years performed the duties of parish minister, but in 1669 was appointed professor of Divinity at Glasgow, and in 1673 settled in London, then becoming chaplain to the King, preacher at the Rolls chapel and lecturer of St. Clement's: he bequeathed to Saltoun parish a sum of money, now producing about £5 yearly, for the increase of the library, besides a considerable sum for educating, clothing and apprenticing 30 poor children, and the proceeds of the bequests now amount to about £80 per annum. Andrew Fletcher, political writer, and pupil of Bishop Burnet, was born in this parish in 1653, and was some time a member of the Scottish Parliament; he afterwards took part in the rebellion of the Duke of Monmouth (1685), for which he suffered exile, but returned in 1688 with William III. and was subsequently a bitter opponent of the union of the two kingdoms; he died in 1716. In East Salton is a fountain to the memory of John Fletcher esq. who died in 1903. Salton Hall, a mansion standing in a fine park on the western border of the parish, is the seat of Andrew Mansel Talbot Fletcher esq. who is the principal landowner. The area comprises 3,640 acres; rateable value, £5,133; the population in 1911 was 386.

TRANENT is a town and police burgh, the head of a small debt court district and a parish in Inveresk poor combination, 10 miles east from Edinburgh, 18 west-by-south from Dunbar, 7 west from Haddington, about 1 south-east from Prestonpans (the nearest) station on the Berwick and Dunbar section of the North British railway, and 2 west from Macmerry terminal station, near the eastern border of the parish. The town occupies elevated ground on the main road from Edinburgh to Dunbar. Many of the inhabitants are engaged in the adjacent collieries, which have been wrought in this quarter from the first discovery of coal in Scotland. The parish church, which stands at the foot of the town, is a plain edifice with a square tower, and here was buried Col. James Gardiner, who fell at the battle of Prestonpans, 21 Sept. 1745. There are two United Free churches, one erected in 1814, the other in 1845, a Roman Catholic church, opened July 28th, 1892, and a Primitive Methodist chapel, erected in 1870. The Town Hall was built in 1888, at a cost of £1,000, and is used for public entertainments. The Royal Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland have branches here. The park in Bridge street is 13 acres in extent, and was presented to the town by Mrs. Mary Shank Polson, in memory of her husband, the late John Polson esq. Near the southern boundary of the parish is Elphinstone Tower, once a baronial residence; and in other parts of the parish are the ruins of Waterfallside Castle, Seton Castle, and the remains of a once collegiate church. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late John Polson esq. the Earl of Wemyss and March and Sir George Grant-Suttie bart. The area of the parish comprises 5,915 acres; rateable value, £47,611; the population in 1901 was 6,117 and in 1911, 8,677; viz.: Tranent burgh, 4,369; Cockenzie and Port Seton burgh, 2,400; Landward, 1,908. Area of the burgh, 190 acres. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 6,105. Included in the civil population were 196 in St. Joseph's Industrial School for Roman Catholic Boys.

ELPHINSTONE, a small village in the parish, is 2 miles south from Tranent, and has a Primitive Methodist chapel. Lord Elphinstone is the principal landowner. Population in 1911, 706.

MEADOWMILL is also a village. Population in 1911, 162.

WHITTINGEHAME is an extensive parish, reaching from the borders of Berwickshire, a length of 11 miles northward, and is bounded on the east by the parish of Stenton, on the west by Garvald and Morham, and on the north-west by Prestonkirk; it is in the East Lothian poor combination, and Haddington small debt court district. The village is very small, and is near the northern extremity of the parish, 6 miles east from Haddington and about 3 south from East Linton station on the Dunbar and Berwick section of the North British railway. Here is a church of the Establishment. Whittingehame, a fine mansion on Whittingehamewater, surrounded by pleasure grounds and plantations, is the seat of the Right Hon. Arthur James Balfour P.C., O.M., M.P. who is the principal landowner; the grounds are open to the public under certain restrictions on Wednesdays and Fridays. Little Says Law, 1,569 feet, and Priestlaw, 1,349 feet above sea level, are peaks in the Lammermoor Hills, which cover a considerable part of the parish. The area comprises 15,465 acres; rateable value, £7,450; the population in 1911 was 523.

YESTER is a parish in the East Lothian poor combination and small debt court district of Haddington; it is bounded on the east by the parish of Garvald, on the west by Bolton and Humbie, on the north by Haddington, and extends southward to Berwickshire; near the southern extremity is Lammer Law, a peak of the Lammermoor Hills, 1,733 feet above sea-level.

GIFFORD is a village on the Gifford water, with a terminal station on a branch from Ormiston of the North British railway, opened in 1901, and is 20 miles east-south-east from Edinburgh and 9 south-east from Tranent. The village is well built, and consists of two spacious streets of unequal length, one end of the longest having a fine avenue of lofty trees, which extends for a mile in a southerly direction, and terminates at Yester House, the mansion of the Marquess of Tweeddale. This village was the birthplace in 1505 of John Knox, the Reformer who instituted the Protestant worship in Scotland, and in 1556 preached against the existing bishops and clergy; in 1563 he was tried on a charge of high treason, but acquitted, and dying 24 Nov. 1572, was buried in St. Giles', Edinburgh. The parish church here, erected in 1708, stands at the eastern end of the shorter street, and contains a pulpit of oak of much greater antiquity than the building itself, called "Knox's pulpit." There is also a United Free church; the old parochial school is now used for lectures &c.

The Marquess of Tweeddale is the principal landowner. The area comprises 9,028 acres; rateable value, £11,150; the population in 1911 was 747.

THE INNER HEBRIDES

See ARGYLLSHIRE for MULL, JURA, ISLAY & Smaller Islands; and INVERNESS-SHIRE for SKYE, Small Isles, &c.

THE OUTER HEBRIDES

HE Outer or Western Hebrides, so called to distinguish them om the inner range of islands, Islay &c., which lie closer in the mainland, consist of those islands exposed to the clantic, and are outside the Little Minch, extending from rth-east, at the Butt of Lewis, to the south-western point of arra Head, and include the large islands of Lewis (with its uthern adjunct of Harris), North and South Uist, Scalpa, aleshare, Benbecula, Bernera and Barra, and the smaller ones Mingalay, Scarpa, Sandray, Taransay, the two Pabbays, overay, Eriskay, Grimsay, Helksar, Vatersay, Hecla and carp, besides the Monach and Shiant islands and many still naller islets. The four northern parishes (or Lewis proper) rm part of the County of Ross, the remainder being in verness-shire. The entire length of this string of islands, hich is sometimes known as Long Island, is about 130 miles, ith a breadth varying from 1 mile to 30. The area is 5,993 acres, viz.: 311,580 of the county of Inverness and 4,413 of the County of Ross and Cromarty; the population 1901 was 46,172, viz.: of the County of Inverness 17,223 nd of the County of Ross and Cromarty 28,949, and in 1911. 3,732, viz.: Inverness-shire 17,129 and Ross-shire and Cro- arty 29,603. The St. Kilda group is also included in ne Outer Hebrides; they lie 60 miles west from Harris. The Hebrides do not appear to have fallen under the Roman yoke, hough known to Pliny as the Hebrides, but formed part of the Dalryadan kingdom, and in the latter years of the 9th century the Scoto Picts who occupied them were overrun by the Northmen, who established a viceroy on the Isle of Man, who had jurisdiction over Dublin, Man and the Western Isles, or Sudreys. The defeat of Hakon, at Largs, in 1263, ended the dominion of the Northmen, the Hebrides being finally separated from the Norwegian dominions and added to the Kingdom of Scotland, though the descendants of Somerled, a chief of Cantyre, who had held the lordship of the Isles, but was defeated and slain at Renfrew in 1164, continued to rule them as feudal chiefs, and appear to have acted as independent sovereigns in forming treaties &c. though nominally subject to the Scottish kings, but James V. suppressed the title, and subsequently the property passed to the Campbells; the chieftainship, however, continued to be a subject of dispute, and the Islands were in a very unsettled condition until, in 1748, regular sheriffs were appointed, and all heritable jurisdictions abolished. After the battle of Culloden, Prince Charles Edward fled to Moidart and sailed from Arisaig, landing on the 24th April, 1746, at Rossinish, Isle of Benbecula, and staying on these islands until 28 June, when he left for Isle of Skye. There are tumuli and remains of round forts, also a fine stone circle at Callerish, in the Isle of Lewis, belonging either to the Stone or Bronze age.

Soil, Minerals &c.—The climate is mild, being surrounded by sea water, and the salt particles are inimical to the growth of trees; therefore the islands are destitute of wood, but there is a considerable extent of heath and peat lands and some large tracts of sand. In Harris the hills rise to between 2,000 and 3,000 feet above the sea level, but in other parts of the islands are dwarfed. Large quantities of kelp are collected along the coasts, and fishing is the staple industry. There are a good many sheep and a fine breed of black cattle.

The coasts are much indented by sea lochs, and Stornoway furnishes an excellent harbour. The communication is by steamer from Glasgow.

Fishing is carried on to some extent; the number of boats registered on December 31, 1918, under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," as belonging to the port of Stornoway was 462 of 3,741 tons, and at Castlebay 293 of 1,334 tonnage.

These islands contain four parishes—Barra, Harris, North Uist and South Uist—in Inverness-shire, and four parishes—Barvas, Lochs, Stornoway and Uig—in Ross-shire, these latter forming the Island of Lewis. There are 12 ecclesiastical parishes, forming the presbyteries of Uist and Lewis, in the Synod of Glenelg. The parliamentary representation is included within those of Ross-shire and Inverness-shire. There are no royal burghs, and only one large town, Stornoway, which is a police burgh and the seat of a sheriff court.

BARRA is a parish in the south of the Long island, and in Long Island poor combination; it contains the village of Castlebay south of the island and the kirktown, known as Craigston, both on the island of Barra, and besides it includes the islands of Vatersay, Sanderay, Pabbay, Mingalay and Berneray. Fishing is carried on to a considerable extent. At Castlebay are the ruins of the old stronghold of the MacNeils; there are several small lochs with good trout fishing, and the shores afford fine cliff scenery. The island of Barra is about 10 miles long by 3 wide, and between its northern headland and Pollachar at the south end of Uist is the Sound of Barra, about 6 miles in breadth; at the north end of the island and a little above the landing place is the unenclosed burial ground of Kilbar, which contains three ruinous chapels, varying in length from over 18 to 42 feet; the largest has triangular-headed windows and a doorway of the same form within a semi-circular arch of very thin stones or slates; and the rest flat-topped windows. At BORVE, on the west coast, are traces of St. Michael's chapel, about 31 feet long. Berneray, or Bernera, is a smooth grassy island forming the extreme southern point of the Hebrides, and bordered by wild and lofty precipices; on it is Barra Head lighthouse, 580 feet above the sea. Vatersay was a fishing station, but the curers have left for Castlebay. MINGALAY is a rough hilly island immediately north of Berneray, from which it is separated by a sound, less than a mile broad. On the island is a neglected burial ground, and a kind of kistvaen, called "The Cross," within a circle of loose stones, 42 feet in diameter; there is also a hill, known as Beinichorn, 882 feet in height. The area of the entire parish comprises 22,222 acres; rateable value, £2,563; the population in 1911 was 2,620. The Congested Districts Board are the principal landowners of Barra.

The population of the islands in 1921 was as follows:—Barra, 2,311; Berneray (on which is Barra Head lighthouse), 5; Mingalay, ; Pabbay, ; Vatersay, 300.

BERNERAY, see HARRIS.

CASTLEBAY, see BARRA.

ENSAY, see HARRIS.

HARRIS is a parish forming the south end of Lewis Island, but is treated as a separate island, being in the county of Inverness, whereas the rest of Lewis is in Ross-shire; it extends from north to south for about 20 miles, by a width of about 8 to 15, and is in the Long Island poor combination, and small debt court district of Lochmaddy, and includes the islands of Berneray, Ensay, Killegray, Pabbay, Scalpay, Scarp, Scotasay, St. Kilda and Taransay, and other small isles. The kirktown, generally known as Tarbert-Harris, to distinguish it from the other Tarberts, stands on an isthmus between East Loch Tarbert and West Loch Tarbert, which nearly divide the parish in half. Near the southern point of Harris stands the church of the Augustine Priory of Rodel (or Rowdill); it was dedicated to St. Clement, and is a cruciform structure 60 feet 7 in. long and 15 feet wide, with a massive square tower of four storeys, a machicolated embattled parapet, and a low pyramidal spire: in the south wall is a recess, elaborately decorated with 12 pictured panels and containing a remarkable sculptured tomb with the effigy of a warrior in plate armour, and an inscription recording that the church was repaired in 1528 by Alexander Macleod, of Dunvegan (d. 1547): in 1787 it was rebuilt by Capt. Alexander Macleod, after its destruction by fire, and in the 19th century it was restored by the Countess of Dunmore. There are several large hills; Chesabhal rising to about 2,000 feet above sea level. Five-eighths of the inhabitants of Harris are landless cottars who pay neither rent nor taxes; these reside in what are known as "black huts," and are most industrious in the manufacture of Harris tweeds. Amhuinnsuidh Castle is the residence of Sir Samuel Edward Scott bart. M.P., D.L. Lord Leverhulme is sole landowner of North Harris, including the village of TARBERT and the islands of SCARP and SCALPAY.

Harris is famous for its excellent sea trout and salmon fishing, its numerous bays, lochs and streams being the natural home of such fish. The Hebridean Sporting Association Limited has a lodge both at Rodil and at Finsbay, to which large numbers of sportsmen resort. Lord Leverhulme is sole landowner of South Harris.

The area of the parish comprises 123,752 acres; rateable value, £6,953; population in 1911, 5,449 in the civil and 4,944 in the ecclesiastical parish, and of Lewis (Harris) Island, 3,994.

BERNERAY is a quoad sacra parish formed out of that of Harris, and including its churches; the island of Berneray lies in the Sound of Harris, half way between the shore of North Uist and the isle of Pabbay. There are two Established and four United Free churches, one Presbyterian Free church, and sixteen public schools in the parish. Lord Dunmore V.C., M.V.O., D.S.O. is sole landowner. The population in 1911 was 501.

ST. KILDA is the name given to a group of small islands in this parish, lying out in the Atlantic, 60 miles west of Harris; the northern point being a hill called Connacher, rising 1,400 feet from sea level. The little village consists of a narrow street or causeway, lined on one side by a number of cottages, and on the other by barns and fuel or bird houses, all rudely built of stone, and thatched with straw. On the island is one burial place, enclosed by a stone wall; the sites of the churches of St. Brandan and St. Columba, and several holy wells, one of which, called "Tobarrimbuadh," is a low square massive structure, with a deep recess into which the water rises, and thence flows down into the glen. The "House of the Female Warrior" is a low structure, rudely built of stone, and covered in with turf; within are three recesses in the thickness of the walls, and near the doorway a pillar. Norman Magnus Macleod of Macleod C.M.G. is sole landowner; the island of Ensay is the property of the trustees of the late Major William Stewart, and Pabbay in Harris Sound belongs to Donald A. Stewart esq. Population of St. Kilda Island in 1911, 80.

SOA, or Soay, is a small islet near St. Kilda, rising out of the sea to a height of 1,031 feet.

Fairs are held near Tarbert Harris on the Thursday after the first Tuesday in July, and on the Thursday after the last Tuesday in October.

The population of the other islands comprised in the parish in 1911 was:—Ensay, 6; Killegray, 3; Pabbay, 4; Scalpay, 589; Scotasay, 20; Taransay, 76; Scarp, 154.

THE ISLAND OF LEWIS

CONSISTS of the parishes of Stornoway, Barvas, Uig and Lochs in the county of Ross and Cromarty, while the fifth parish, Harris (which, though geographically part of Lewis, is considered almost a distinct island), is in the county of Inverness: the portion of the island known as "Lewis" is 40 miles from north to south, by 30 in breadth, and is bounded on the east by the Minch, south by Harris and west and north by the Atlantic Ocean. A large extent of moor or waste land on the island has been drained, and several hundred acres planted with timber trees, whilst immediately surrounding Lewis Castle pleasure grounds and walks have been laid out, and drives formed. The principal eminences in the island are Monach, or Murnag, 800 feet; Ben Barvas, 900 feet; Mealashal, 1,750 feet; Ben Mheadhonach, 1,250, and Ben Mhor, 1,750. The area of the four parishes comprising the island is 428,165 acres; rateable value, £37,407; the population in 1911 was 35,052. The area of Barvas parish is 97,543 acres; the population in 1911 was: civil, 6,953; ecclesiastical, 2,899. The island was acquired by the late Sir James Matheson bart. of Achany, in 1844, from the representatives of the late Earl of Seaforth, for the sum of £190,000. Lord Leverhulme is the present proprietor. Under his ownership considerable works of development are now (1921) in progress.

Stornoway, Uig and Lochs will be found under separate headings.

BARVAS is a parish in the extreme northern end of Lewis, with a kirktown, 12 miles north-west from Stornoway; it is 20 miles in length, with a breadth of about 8, and is bounded on the north and north-west and north-east by the Atlantic, the south and south-east by the parish of Stornoway and on the south-west by Uig, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lewis poor combination. Here are Established, Free and United Free churches. The "Thrushel stone," a hugh menhir at Upper Shader, in this parish, is said to commemorate a victory gained here by the Morisons over the Macaulays. At Bragar are remains of the church of St. John the Baptist, consisting of chancel and nave, and 32½ feet in length; at Mealabost Borve are remains of St. Bridget's chapel, 34 feet long, and at South Galson more perfect remains of the small chapel of the Holy Cross, about 19 feet long and 12 wide; near the Butt of Lewis, at Eorrapidh, the "Teampull Môr (big temple), 30 by 44 feet, is seen standing in a cornfield; the ancient name was St. Mallonuy or St. Mulvay, but it is usually called at the present day St. Olaf. Recently a portion of this church has been roofed, and the interior of the building otherwise renovated to admit of occasional services (Episcopal) being held. About half a mile to the left of the lighthouse is the "Luchruban" or "Pigmies Isle;" on the isle are the remains of a curious structure, probably the retreat of an anchorite. The Pigmies Isle and its little chapel (24 feet 9 inches long) are mentioned by Captain Dymes, who visited them in 1630, and by subsequent writers. At Barvas are the remains of St. Mary's church, and at Lower Shader those of St. Peter's church. There is a Druidical circle of stones to the south-east of Loch au Duin at Lower Shader.

CROSS is a quoad sacra parish, formed from this parish, of which it constitutes the northern portion, and contains a group of villages known as Ness, extending along the road from Dell village to Port of Ness. Shawbost constitutes the southern portion, and was at one time part of the parish of Lochs. There are Established, Free and United Free churches at Cross, and Established and Free churches at Shawbost. The Butt of Lewis is a singular detached rock off the northern point of the parish, and near it are a lighthouse and coastguard station. The area comprises 85,043 acres; rateable value, £3,033; population in 1911, 3,141.

LOCHS is a parish on the east coast of the island, bounded south by Harris, west by Uig, north by Stornoway and east by the Minch; its principal village, Luerbost, on the shore of a loch of the same name, is about 8 miles south of Stornoway; the parish extends for 20 miles from north to south with a breadth of 15 miles, the eastern coast being much broken by lochs, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lewis poor combination. The area comprises 114,601 acres; rateable value, £3,160; population in 1911, 6,689 in the civil parish and 6,689 in the ecclesiastical parish, which includes Barvas and Uig.

The SHIANT or "Enchanted" islands form part of the parish, but were uninhabited in 1911. These islands lie off the south-east coast of Lewis, and are said to be unequalled for their wild and picturesque beauty. Rough Island, the largest, is about 1 mile in length, with a height of over 500 feet, and at its southern extremity lies House Island, which is united to it by a strip of shingly strand, and on part of this are traces of a chapel and a burial ground; the third island is about a mile eastward, and once had a chapel dedicated to the Holy Virgin. In this parish is situated the extensive and famous deer forest of Park.

STORNOWAY is a seaport and police burgh and parish in the island of Lewis, county of Ross and Cromarty. The town is 60 miles north from Portree, in the I. of Skye, and 45 from Poolewe, on Loch Ewe in Ross-shire, to which, from Stornoway, there is a submarine telegraph. It is situated in north latitude 58 deg. 12 min. and in west longitude 6 deg. 18 min. 10 sec. at the head of a fine bay, called Loch Stornoway, one of the safest and most commodious harbours in the north, and easy of access to vessels of any burthen at any time of the tide. The north side of the bay and harbour is formed by the peninsula of Eye, which projects into the Minch for about 6 miles, then turns to the north for another 6 and forms a large bay 7 by 5 miles, opening to the north-east. A lighthouse stands on Arnish point, on the south side of the harbour, erected by the Commissioners of Northern Lights, and there is another lighthouse at Tiumpanhead, the extreme point of the Eye peninsula, erected in 1900. The parish, which is bounded east by the Minch, south by Lochs and west by Barvas, extends 17 miles by 8 from north-west to south-west. The town, which is the head of a sheriff court district and of a poor combination, is built round the bay, in form of an amphitheatre. A quay, with slips and landing places, has been constructed, and a sea wall erected round the basin of the harbour. Situated on the quay is the fish mart, built in 1894 by the Pier and Harbour Commission, at a cost of about £1,500.

The white fishery, consisting of cod and ling, has been long and successfully prosecuted in these waters, besides which there are several salmon fishing stations in the district. Ling and cod are caught during the winter and spring months, and are dried and sent to the Glasgow and Liverpool markets. The months of May, June and July form the season for herring fishing, during which it is estimated that close upon 800 boats, with a complement of seven hands to each boat, are employed. The total quantity of white fish landed in 1913 was 606,212 cwts.; value £192,753; exported 86,121 barrels. The total value of all fish cured in 1913 was £247,987. About 90 per cent. of the barrels exported go to Petrograd market. In 1914 the total was 629,765 cwts.; value £158,076. Of this amount 573,960 cwts. was herrings; value, £142,668; exported 36,095 barrels. The total value of fish cured in 1914 was £286,823. Many steamers are employed in carrying the fish to the nearest railway stations at Kyle of Lochalsh and Oban. At Stornoway a large quantity is prepared in a kippered state, and exported principally to the English markets, there being several establishments in full operation. In 1918, 708 sailing and steam vessels of 101,961 tons arrived at the port with cargoes and in ballast and 717 of 100,332 tonnage departed. In the general coasting trade 668 vessels of 75,711 tons arrived and 699 of 74,611 tonnage departed. In 1918, 162 fishing boats, of a total tonnage of 3,741 were registered at the port of Stornoway and 23 other vessels, aggregating 1,094 tons, were also registered there.

A small import trade is done, the total value in 1919 being £7,198, of which £7,178 was sawn wood.

The streets of the burgh are well lighted with gas, the works having been erected in 1848. Stornoway was erected into a burgh of barony by James VI. and by Charles I. it was created a royal burgh in 1628, but through the jealousy and opposition of the royal burghs of Scotland, the charter was eventually withdrawn. The General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, has been adopted by the burgh. A sheriff court sits every Wednesday during the session for ordinary and small debt business, and justice of peace, commissary and criminal courts are held as occasion may require. There are Established churches at Stornoway and Cnoc or Knock in the Eye Peninsula and United Free churches at Stornoway, and at Garrabost, on the peninsula of Eye; there are also three Free churches, a Free Presbyterian church, and a meeting house in Francis street. The Episcopal Mission Church of St. Peter, built in 1838, will seat 120 persons. The Rev. R. K. Davis M.A. has been incumbent since 1920. The Municipal buildings, erected in 1903, at a cost of £12,000, from designs by Mr. John Robertson, architect, of Inverness, were destroyed by fire on March 2nd, 1918. In the church of Ui (Eye) is a rudely carved effigy of a warrior, life size, on a coffin-shaped slab, and now placed upright on a square base; the figure is habited in bascinet and camail, and a tunic with long sleeves, quilted vertically, and confined by a belt; the right hand holds a spear, the left grasps the handle of a broad straight sword; the effigy has been assigned to Roderick Macleod, of the late 15th century. Here also was buried William (Mackenzie) 5th Earl of Seaforth, who died in 1740. The Lewis Hospital, erected at a cost of about £2,200, is a substantial building of stone from designs by Mr. John Heaton Gall, architect, of Inverness. The Combination Poor House was erected in 1896-7, at a cost of about £10,000, from plans by Mr. James M. Thompson, of Edinburgh. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. The hotels are the Lewis, the Royal, the Imperial and Caledonian. The Masonic Hall, a handsome structure, is used for assemblies, concerts and public meetings. The Nicolson Institution, Matheson road, founded by Alexander M. Nicolson esq. and now under the management of the Education Authority, was endowed by the late Sir James Matheson with £35 yearly for the teacher and with a site for the building and playgrounds, and has since been enlarged so as to serve as a centre for technical education in the island of Lewis. There are several societies for mutual improvement. Lewis Castle, a fine mansion in the Tudor castellated style, occupies a commanding position west of the town, and was erected by the late Sir James Matheson, at an outlay of £60,000; it is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds, and is now the seat of Lord Leverhulme. On 2nd Sept. 1902, Stornoway was visited by His late Majesty King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra, who were entertained at Lewis Castle by Lt.-Col. Duncan Matheson. In this parish the surface generally is flat and moorland, the shores partly sand and partly rock, and indented by a number of bays. Steamers ply frequently between Glasgow and Stornoway, and a mail steamer daily, via Applecross Sound, Kyle of Loch Alsh and Mallaig, where there is a terminal station on the North British railway. The most remarkable ancient remains in the island of Lewis are the standing stones or Temple of Calernish, for which see Uig. At GRESS, on Broad bay, north-east of the island, is a cave 200 feet in length, and frequented by seals; here also, in an open burial ground by the shore, stands the ancient and fairly perfect church of St. Aula, about 19 feet long and 14 wide: over the doorway is a stone bearing the date 1685, when it was probably repaired. Lord Leverhulme is proprietor of the Island of Lewis; there are many works of development in progress (1921). The area comprises 63,160 acres; rateable value of the burgh, £19,235, and of the parish, £24,131. The population of the civil parish in 1911 was 3,438, including 26 inmates and 5 officials in the Lewis Combination Poorhouse, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 8,498. The area of the burgh is 255 acres; population in 1911, 3,806.

TRUMISGARRY, see NORTH UIST.

UIG is a parish in the western part of Lewis Island, with a kirktown near the coast, 34 miles west from Stornoway; it is about 24 miles in length with a breadth of about 18, and is bounded on the north-east by the parish of Barvas, on the east by Stornoway, south-east by Lochs, south by Loch Resort, and on the west and north-west by the Atlantic, and is in the small debt court district of Stornoway and Lewis poor combination; the parish includes the isles of Bernera and Flannen. The famous Callernish stones on the northern shore of Loch Roag, in the parish of Uig, form a circle of 13 monoliths, 43 feet in diameter, and approached from the four points of the compass by avenues of monoliths, one of which is 173 feet in length; the monoliths in the circle vary from 4½ to 12 feet in height, and towards and almost touching the eastern point of the circle a circular cairn was discovered in 1858, containing a cruciform stone-lined chamber divided into two parts, with a passage leading to the outside of the cairn; fragments of burnt human bones and other animal matter were found, clearly showing that the circle was a grave enclosure; the late Sir James Matheson had the ground cleared and the accumulations of soil removed, thus opening up the monoliths, and surrounded the whole with a wire fence. Half a mile to the east is another smaller circle, and other detached specimens of these stones exist in various parts of the island. The sole right of fishing in the River Black Water and its tributaries, and all lochs connected therewith, belongs to the proprietor of the Garynahine Temperance hotel. The parish contains an Established, two United Free churches and a Free church, and 10 public schools. At Mealasradh are some remains of a chapel, about 19 feet long, standing in a burial ground, and near by are traces of a nunnery of Black Sisters. At a little distance from this locality there were discovered upwards of 60 ebony figures, beautifully executed, and from their costume evidently very ancient. Near Gallonhead, in a small hollow, is a ruined chapel, called "Blessing House," about 18 feet long, built of rude masonry, with two doorways, a splayed east window, and a wall niche on either side. At Valtos are traces of another chapel of the same size: at the head of Loch Carloway slight traces remain of St. Michael's chapel, and at Dal Morr are the remains of a chapel, 60 feet in length. The area comprises 129,109 acres; rateable value, £3,634; the population in 1911 was 4,462 in the civil and 3,436 in the ecclesiastical parish.

The population in 1911 of the islands comprising the parish was:—Bernera, 730; Flannen (on which is a lighthouse), 3; Lewis, 3,729.

NORTH UIST is an island and parish about 17 miles long by a width of from 3 to 13 miles, bounded on the east by the Little Minch, on the west by the Atlantic, north by the Sound of Harris, and south by Loch Rueval; the parish is in Long Island poor combination, and includes the smaller isles of Baleshare, Boreray, Grimsay, Heisker, Kirkibost, Leiravay, Oronsay, Ronay, Shellay and Vallay.

LOCHMADDY, the chief village in the parish, is situated on the eastern side of the island, at the head of Loch Maddy, which forms a natural harbour, the entrance being protected by three rocky promontories known as Maddy Mohr, Maddy Beg and Maddy Gruamuch. Here is an Admiralty signal station. At Kilmuir and Bayhead are Established and United Free churches; at Carinish, on the south-west, an Established Mission and United Free church, and Mission halls at Lochmaddy and Sollas on the north-west. On the island is a Court House, a Combination Poor House, one hotel and two licensed inns. On the Monach Islands, off the south-west coast, is a lighthouse, and at the entrance to Lochmaddy is a revolving flash lighthouse.

Auction sales for cattle and horses are held in July and September. There are waste-burying grounds, half covered with drifted sand, at various places on the north shore, and at Clachan traces of a chapel. On the island of Vallay is an open burying ground, with a fragment of a cross, 5ft. 4in. high, and having four round holes on the head. At HOUGARY, the westernmost point, is the ancient churchyard of Kilmuir, where are some much worn slabs, while inland on the main road is the modern parish church of Kilmuir. At CARINISH, on the south-west, are the remains of the ancient church of the Trinity, consisting of two rectangular structures, one about 62 feet in length and the other 23, connected by a low vaulted passage with a window on each side. The area of the entire parish comprises 75,513 acres; rateable value, £5,532; the population in 1911 was 3,677 in the civil parish, island 2,881, and 2,712 in the ecclesiastical parish. Included in the civil population were 31 inmates in Long Island Combination Poorhouse, of which 27 were in the lunatic wards.

The population in 1911 of the Islands comprising the parish was:—Baleshare, 184; Boreray, 89; Grimsay, 362; Heisker, 81; Leiravay, 25; Oronsay, 7; Ronay, 6; Shillay (on which is a lighthouse), 5; Vallay, 29.

TRUMISGARRY, a quoad sacra parish, erected from the civil parish of North Uist, is in the northern part of the island, and has an Established church. Population in 1911, 965.

SOUTH UIST is an island and parish 7 miles south of North Uist and about 27 miles long, including the island of Benbecula, by a width of 7 at its widest part, bounded on the west by the Atlantic, on the east by the Little Minch, on the north by Benbecula Sound and on the south by the Sound of Barra; the surface in the northern part and on the western side is flat, but the remainder is hilly and mountainous. Hecla Hill rising 1,988 feet, Ben More 2,035 feet and Stielaval 1,227 feet above sea level. The parish is in Long Island Poor Combination, and includes the isles Benbecula, Eriskay, Flodday, Grimsay and Wiay. Scattered through the island are the ruins of several ancient castles; at Calvay Island, Ormiclate, and Borve, Benbecula, while more interesting still are many prehistoric lake dwellings. The salmon and sea trout fishing are excellent, and the shootings good, geese being in myriads on the machar lands along the Atlantic shore.

LOCHBOISDALE is a village near the south-eastern extremity of the parish, situated on a loch of the same name, and has a pier. Mail steamers call here three times weekly, and cargo steamers twice weekly. Here is a Marconigraph station. Cattle sales are held in July, on the Wednesday after Inverness sheep and wool fair, and in September on the first Wednesday of the month. The area comprises 90,093 acres; rateable value, £5,859; the population in 1911 was 5,383 in the civil parish, island 1,639, and 3,999 in the ecclesiastical parish.

BENBECULA is a quoad sacra parish; the island lies between North and South Uist. Prince Charles Edward, after his retreat from Culloden, landed at Rossinish Point in this island, 24 June, 1746, and remained here and in other parts of South Uist until the 28th June, when he left for Skye, under the guidance of Flora Macdonald. At Balivanich, or Nunton, on the north-west of the island, are the remains of a chapel, 56 feet long and 19 wide, with very narrow square-headed windows: near this are traces of another building about 30 feet long, and also, within an enclosed burial ground, a third chapel 25 feet long by 16 wide, with windows similar to the first and fragments of a cross. Population in 1911, 1,384.

The population in 1911 of the other islands in the parish was:—Eriskay, 453; Flodday, about 30; Grimsay, 36; rest of Benbecula (main island), 1,273.

INVERNESS-SHIRE

THIS is the largest county in Scotland, though far from having the largest population; it extends from the Moray Firth to Loch Linnhe, at the head of the Firth of Lorn, a distance of nearly 80 miles, and from the borders of Banffshire, about 50 miles west of the North Sea, to the Atlantic Ocean, a distance, including Skye, of about 120 miles, and also includes parts of the Outer Hebrides. The whole surface comprises 2,695,094 acres of land and 89,847 of water; only about one eighteenth part of the land is cultivated, and the moor and heath lands cover 1,426,399 acres. The shire comprehends a variety of districts of local importance—as Badenoch in its south part, Lochaber on the south-west, Moidart on the west, Glenelg on the north-west, Glengany in its central part, and others of less consequence, as Glengarry, Glenmorison, Glenshiel &c. The islands annexed to the county are Skye, Harris, North and South Uist, Benbecula, Barra, Eigg, Muck, Rum and Canna; besides a number of small islands. The Caledonian Canal intersects the county from south-west to north-east, running through the chain of lochs which lie along the Great Glen of Albion. The population in 1901 was 90,104, and in 1911, 87,272, viz.:—Males, 42,440; females, 44,832. The inhabited houses in 1901 were 18,968; uninhabited, 1,047, and building, 110, and in 1911, inhabited, 19,266; uninhabited, 1,508, and building, 91. This county is the first in Scotland in extent, though only ranking the eleventh in population.

Ancient History.—This shire was held by the Picts, and Saint Columba is said to have visited their king. The Romans penetrated thus far and had a camp (Banatia) 8 miles from Inverness; for many years the county was the field of constant encounters between rival clans, the successful chief generally obtaining from the king the keepership of the city castle. Edward I. of England captured this fortress in 1303, but it was retaken by Bruce; from 1508 the Earls of Huntly held Inverness Castle until the year 1562. Montrose fought several battles here, and Cromwell erected (1657) a strong fort in its capital city. Prince Charles Edward landed at Arisaig, in the south-west angle of the county, in 1745, and left the same port next year on his return to France; Culloden having been fought on the north-east border in April of that year.

Surface, Soil, Produce &c.—The greater part of the county is of a mountainous nature, especially on the western side; the most remarkable mountain being Ben Nevis, which rises 4,406 feet above sea level. This eminence stands to the north-east of Fort William, near the shore of an arm of the sea, and from the summit in clear weather a view can be obtained across nearly the whole of the north of Scotland from sea to sea; it is generally enveloped, however, in a mantle of clouds, and consists principally of a fine brown porphyry, and contains red granite of a most beautiful grain; it is said also to possess veins of silver and lead. One of its precipices is nearly 500 feet perpendicular; and in the fissures, even in the warmest weather, snow remains unmelted. Around its southern base flows the Nevis streamlet, through the glen of that name, and at the opening of this valley the Marquess of Montrose achieved the brilliant victory of Inverlochy. On the summit is an Observatory, erected by the Scottish Meteorological Society, and about a hundred yards to the south of this is an hotel, which was opened in July, 1885. The other eminences in the county of considerable height are:—Melfourvonie, 3,600; Scarsough, 3,412; and Craig Padrig, 1,150 feet respectively. Inverness-shire is divided into two almost equal parts by a valley running from south-west to north-east, called Glenmore-na h' Alabin, or the "Great Glen of Albion"; through the greater part of its length are a connected succession of lakes. On the eastern side of the county agriculture is carried on more successfully than in the interior and on the western coast. Along the whole of the western division the climate is more humid than on the eastern side. On account of these characteristics, the principal employment of the farmer in this district is the breeding of black cattle and sheep, especially the former. The mountains and forests are widely inhabited by the red deer; the alpine and common hare and other species of game are also abundant. The extensive plains which surround the lakes are in general fertile. The military roads in this county, made by the soldiers under General Wade, never fail to excite the astonishment of travellers, and additional roads were formed, and bridges constructed, under the direction of Government, through every district of this extensive shire. On the confines of the county are extensive tracts of natural wood, evidently the remains of large forests; the fir woods of Glenmore and Strathspey are supposed to be more than all the other natural woods of Scotland if summed together. The indigenous trees are oak, fir, birch, ash, mountain-ash, holly, elm, sycamore, hazel, and the Scottish poplar; those planted are chiefly larch, spruce, silver-fir, beech, plane, and fruit trees. Those districts in cultivation, along with those in the course of gradual adaptation to purposes of husbandry, are in the north-east, or Lowland quarter, yielding good crops. In the district in the vicinity of Spey, near Castle Grant, an improved system of cultivation has for many years been introduced. For some years past, great disaffection has existed among the small farmers, or crofters, as they are termed, by reason of inability to subsist on the production of their small boldings, and for their relief the "Crofters Acts, 1886-7-8," have been passed. The exports of the county are cattle, wool and corn; the skins of goats, deer, foxes, hares and rabbits; salmon, herrings, dried and salted fish, and fir timber, with the produce of the labours of the hempen and thread manufactures. The spinning of flax and wool is the home occupation of the females over the whole county.

The only minerals raised in 1919 were:—Gravel and sand, 5,379 tons; igneous rock, 12,724 tons, and sandstone, 1,000 tons.

The chief crops, as shown from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are:—Wheat, 111 acres; barley, including bere, 6,096; oats, 29,652; rye, 817; total of corn crops, 36,816 acres; turnips and swedes, 9,626 acres; potatoes, 5,513 acres; cabbage, 37 acres; vetches or tares, beans, mashlum &c. 77 acres; rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, for hay, 11,797 acres; pasture (not for hay), 19,981 acres. The area of the county (exclusive of water) is 2,695,094 acres, of which 1,537,779 are mountain and heath land used for grazing; 63,670 permanent grass; 84,567 arable land.

The live stock in 1920 comprised 6,066 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 48; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,358; under one year, 665; cows in milk, 16,475; cows in calf, but not in milk, 2,341; heifers in calf, 1,161; bulls, 551; other cattle, two years and above, 5,907; one year and under two, 9,091; under one year, 11,582; total, 47,108; ewes kept for breeding, 231,159; rams, 7,254; other sheep, one year and above, 90,268; under one year, 168,269; total, 496,950; sows kept for breeding, 226; other pigs, 1,324.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 2,497; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 2,757; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 1,164; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 392; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 172; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 107; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 98; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 131; exceeding 300 acres, 29; total, 7,347.

The number of fishing boats registered at Inverness in 1918 was 452, aggregating a tonnage of 8,387, and there were also 429, aggregating 1,472 tons, registered at Broadford, Isle of Skye. 138 other vessels, equal to 4,654 tons, were registered in 1918 as being owned at Inverness.

Rivers and Lakes, Canals and Railways.—The principal river is the Ness, which flows from Loch Ness to the Moray Firth; the next is the Spey, which, though a larger river in its lower parts, is about the same size while running through the shire; the smaller rivers are the Beauly, the Foyers, the Garry, the Coiltrie, the Glass, the Morriston, the Enneric, the Kinnie, with others of still minor note; the whole produce ample supplies of trout and salmon. On the Foyers is a celebrated waterfall, descending in one leap to the depth of 200 feet; a dense mist is continually seen rising from the broken water, and the noise resulting from the fall may be heard at a considerable distance. The Caledonian Canal is composed of a chain of lakes, connected with each other and with the North Sea on one side, and the Atlantic on the other, by artificial watercourses and lochs, and stretches across Inverness-shire, in a south-westerly direction, from Inverness, on the Moray Firth, to Loch Eil; it was constructed at the expense of Government on a survey made in 1803-4, by Messrs. Telford and Jessop, engineers, showing the length of the combined lochs to be 37 miles 41 chains, and the requisite canals to be 21 miles 55 chains: it was finally opened in 1822; the highest level is between Lochs Orch and Lochy, 94 feet above high water at Inverness, and 90 above that at Fort William; the cost was close on £1,000,000, but it is only available for vessels of light draught. The county possesses several other lochs, the largest of which are Laggan, Arkaig, Garry, Treig and Eright and some sea lochs on the west coast, besides that of Beauly, at the end of the Moray Firth. The railways are the Highland line, which runs through the eastern part of the county, by Boat of Garten to Aviemore Junction, where it is joined by a branch running up the bank of the Spey by Kingussie and Dalwhinnie to Blair Athole and Perth; another branch coming in from Nairn enters the county near Fort George, runs to Inverness, where it crosses the canal and leaves at Beauly; another line to Inverness comes from Aviemore Junction, and in the south the West Highland railway enters the county a little south of Loch Treig, and passing by Loch Laggan, Spean Bridge and Roy Bridge, trends south to Fort William and Banavie.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Inverness-shire comprehends 32 civil parishes and part of one parish, and 42 whole and 8 parts of ecclesiastical parishes. The county is singularly destitute of towns—the only one it possesses being Inverness, which is a royal burgh. The police burghs are Fort William and Kingussie. The counties of Inverness and Ross and Cromarty return three members to Parliament in three divisions, viz.:—Inverness, Ross and Cromarty and Western Isles, the Inverness division comprising the county of Inverness inclusive of all burghs situated therein, except so far as contained in the Western Isles Division, and returning one member. The county parliamentary constituency for 1919 numbered 32,255.

ABERARDER, see DAVIOT WITH DUNLICHTY.

ABERNETHY is a large parish in the north-east angle of the county, 16 miles from north to south by 11 in breadth, and bounded on the north by Elginshire, east by Banffshire and north and west by Duthil parish, in Nairn poor combination. The village of NETHY BRIDGE, in this parish, 5 miles east of Duthil, has a station on the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten section of the North of Scotland railway, which joins the Highland railway at the latter station; it is also 1 mile north-west from Broomhill station on the Highland railway. There are Established and United Free churches. The southern portion is mountainous and contains many of the Grampian hills, the largest of which, Cairngorm, is 4,084 feet above sea level; there are several lochs, Loch Morlich being the principal; the river Nethy runs from the south through the parish to the Spey. Close to the church are the remains of Castle Roy, an old fortress of the Comyns. The area comprises 78,088 acres; rateable value, £19,185; population in 1911, 1,228.

KINCARDINE, in this parish, is 6 miles to the west, and has an Established Mission church.

NETHY BRIDGE is a village in this parish, with a station on the Strathspey section of the Great North of Scotland railway and a good hotel. There is a nine-hole golf course a quarter of a mile distant. Trout fishing is free in the district, and the pine forest of Abernethy is the largest in Scotland. Population returned with the parish.

ABERTARFF, see BOLESKINE WITH ABERTARFF.

ACHNACARRY, see KILMALIE.

ALVIE is a very mountainous parish and village in the eastern part of the county, intersected at its narrowest part by the river Spey and the Highland railway, the latter having a station at Kincraig in the parish, and one at Aviemore, on its northern border; the extent of the parish from north-west to south is about 23 miles, and its breadth varies from 4 to 8 miles. The principal inhabited portions lie along the rivers Spey and Feshie. The church and manse of Alvie stand on a peninsula, almost surrounded by the Loch of the same name, 10 miles south of Duthil; there is also a United Free church and a Mission hall at Kincraig, 3 miles farther south-by-west. Near the Mission hall stands a granite cross, erected in memory of Piper Peter Stewart and his comrades of the Cameron Highlanders, who fell in the battle of Atbara, on the Nile, 8 April, 1898. About a mile west of Loch Alvie, on the farm of Easter Dalfour, there is a Druid circle, large and distinct; two circles are visible, the inner and outer made of large stone slabs, a few yards from which stands a large rock, known in the locality as "Carr's Stone." On the left bank of the Spey stands Kinrara, a residence of the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. and which also gives the title of Earl to the Gordon Lennox family. In a private graveyard close to the Spey, and not far from the house, are interred the remains of Jane,

Countess of Gordon, d. 14 April, 1812, and on a rock in the same vale is a monument of granite, 90 feet high, to her husband, Alexander, 4th Duke of Gordon, d. 17 June, 1827; this was raised by subscription, amounting to about £1,200, and near by is a cairn, in memory of highlanders who fell at Waterloo. Three miles east of the village of Kingussie is Balavil, the seat of C. J. B. MacPherson esq. D.L., J.P. Near to the house and roadside is a monument to the "Bard of Morven:" and half-way between it and the village, a little off the road, is a cave of some interest. Lynwilg Hotel, in this parish, is 2 miles south-west from Aviemore station. Alfred Donald Mackintosh esq. (The Mackintosh) Lord Lieut.), Sir John Frecheville Ramsden bart. Sir George Macpherson-Grant bart. R. B. Whitehead esq. C. J. B. Macpherson esq. and the Duke of Richmond and Gordon K.G., G.C.V.O., C.B. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 86,596 acres; rateable value, £9,336; population in 1911, 300 in the civil parish, and 564 in the ecclesiastical parish.

ARDERSIER is a large village and parish on the Moray Firth, in the north of the county and 11 miles north-east of Inverness, in the poor combination of Nairn and small debt court district of Inverness; the extent of the parish is only 4 miles by 2½, and its boundaries are the parish of Petty on the south, Nairnshire on the east, the Moray Firth on the north and Inverness Firth on the west. The village (formerly known as Campbeltown) is situated on a picturesque bay, at the foot of an eminence called "Cromwell's Mount," on the summit of which are the remains of a fortification. There are Established, United Free and Free churches. In the village is a strong chalybeate spring, much frequented by invalids. The Fort George Railway station is on the Highland line, the station being on a branch from the old Fort George station, now named Gollanfield Junction. At Fort George is the depot of No. 72 Regimental District. There is a ferry below the fort with a small pier. Capt. John Orr-Ewing, the Earl of Cawdor and the Crown are the principal landowners. A fair is held annually on the 12th of August. The area of the parish comprises 3,826 acres; rateable value, £2,976; the population in 1911 was 1,913, including 1,021 military and other occupants in Fort George Barracks.

BEAULY is a large village, in the parish of Kilmorack, at the mouth of the Beauly river, where it debouches into the basin of the same name, which forms the head of Inverness Firth; it has a station on the Highland railway, and is 12 miles direct west from Inverness, on the edge of an extensive plain backed by hills, in the centre of which are the fine falls of Kilmorack. There is a small harbour, to which vessels of 150 tons can come up at high water. The exports chiefly consist of timber, grain and wool; the imports being principally coal and lime. The village is lighted by electricity. Here are Established, United Free and Catholic churches. The Phipps Institute and Reading Room, erected in 1902-3, was presented to the village by Henry Phipps esq. of Pittsburg, and includes a large hall and recreation room, a free site being given by Lord Lovat; adjoining is a bowling green. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland and the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and 3 miles north-east of the town is the Ord distillery. The Cistercian Priory here, founded in 1230 by Sir John Bissett, of Lovat, stands close to the edge of the river; the last prior resigned the lands and buildings to Hugh, Lord Lovat, and little now remains but the church, which is ruinous, and used as a burial-place for the Frasers, Chisholms and Mackenzies, of Gairloch. At BRIDGEND, near the village, is a mineral spring. Fairs for cattle are held on the Muir of Ord from the month of April to November, both inclusive; they occur on the second or third Wednesday and Thursday in each month, but are regulated by the Falkirk trysts. There is good salmon fishing in the Beauly, in the vicinity of the Kilmorack Falls, which are noted for the breadth of water falling over. The population in 1911 was 882.

BOLESKINE with ABERTARFF form a united parish 24 miles in length, and from 10 to 12 in breadth, stretching along from the Pass of Inverfarigaig on the south side of Loch Ness to the east end of Loch Oich, embracing the great glen of Stratherrick, Foyers, the famed Falls of Foyers, and the village of Fort Augustus (which see). The kirktown of Boleskine, on the east bank of the river Foyers, is 20 miles south-west from Inverness. Here is an Established church, and a Catholic church at Croftbeg. There is a pier at Foyers and another at Inverfarigaig, both on Loch Ness, at which David MacBrayne's steamers call. The mail steamer from Inverness to Fort Augustus also calls daily all the year round. The pass of Inverfarigaig is about two miles long, and at some parts is so narrow as to barely permit of the construction of a road. About half a mile up the pass is a monument to Dr. Bryce, a noted geologist, who was killed here whilst in pursuit of his studies in 1877. The Falls of Foyers are about 3 miles from Inverfarigaig, on the road passing along the shores of Loch Ness, and the Falls of Cullachy and Garry are distant 2 and 8 miles respectively from Fort Augustus. A mile from the lower Falls of Foyers is the General's Hut, named after General Wade, who constructed most of the roads in the Highlands, but now known as the Foyers Hotel. At Foyers are the works of the British Aluminium Co. Limited. At White Bridge, in this parish, 9 miles north-east of Fort Augustus, there is a large hotel. The principal landowners are Mrs. Cuninghame, the British Aluminium Co. Limited, and Lord Lovat K.T., K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., C.B., D.S.O. The area comprises 110,825 acres; rateable value, £14,938; the population in 1911 was 1,896 in the civil and 1,000 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CORPACH is a widely-spread but not very populous village, in the parish of Kilmallie, on the north shore of Loch Eil, 3 miles north from Fort William, and is chiefly to be noticed as being the southern commencement of the Caledonian canal, which here enters Loch Eil by four locks; a little above are eight others, called Neptune's Staircase; these are capable of admitting vessels of 300 tons (not drawing above 12 feet of water), and each lock rises 8 feet. Kilmallie parish church, erected in 1784, is in the village, about half a mile from the end of the canal and near the church stands a pyramidical obelisk, of considerable height, with a large tablet of white marble at its base, to the memory of Colonel John Cameron, slain at the battle of Waterloo, 18 June, 1815, while commanding the 92nd Highlanders. At Corpach are United Free and Free churches. The road through Corpach leads to the district of Arisaig, about 35 miles distant, and to Moidart, Glenfinnan and Loch Shiel. At BORRODALE, in Moidart, Prince Charles Stuart landed on the 25th of July, 1745. He sailed up Loch Shiel on the 18th of August, and on the following day landed and entered Glenfinnan, where he was met by Cameron of Lochiel and Macdonald of Keppoch, with their clansmen. Commemorative of this circumstance, Macdonald of Glenaladale erected a monument at Glenfinnan.

DUTHIL is a village and with Rothiemurchus forms a parish, near the eastern extremity of the county, and the parish extending from Aberdeenshire, its southern boundary, about 20 miles northward to the counties of Elgin and Nairn; the parish of Moy and Dalarossie lies on the west, and Abernethy on the east; a part of the parish of Cromdale was transferred by Boundary Order No. 112, under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, to Duthil parish, which is in Nairn poor combination, and has four stations, viz.:—Aviemore, Carr Bridge, Boat of Garten and Broomhill, on the Perth and Inverness section of the Highland railway; the Great North of Scotland railway also runs to Boat of Garten. The river Dulnan traverses the heart of the parish for nearly 12 miles, and the Spey flows along a considerable portion of the eastern border. The village, near the north bank of the Dulnan, and on the Inverness road, is about two miles east from Carr Bridge railway station.

ROTHIEMURCHUS is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Duthil: it is situated between the Cairngorm mountain and the river Spey, and is 1 mile south from Aviemore Junction station.

AVIEMORE is a district near the south-western border of the parish, and has a junction station on a branch of the Highland railway to Inverness. Three miles from the station, near the foot of the Cairngorm mountain, is Loch-an-eilan, in the centre of which stands the remains of a castle once belonging to the Wolfe of Badenoch: although roofless, the walls are still practically intact. On a ruined turret in the western corner a pair of eagles have every season built a nest and reared a brood.

BOAT OF GARTEN is a small village on the river Spey, with a station on the Highland railway, which is also the junction for the Craigellachie and Boat of Garten section of the Great North of Scotland railway. Here is a public hall.

CARR BRIDGE, or "Bridge of Carr," is a small village in Duthil parish, and has a station on the main line of the Highland railway, from Perth to Inverness. Two and a half miles west of the parish church is the arch of the old bridge crossing the river Dulnan. Here is a public hall.

The principal landowners in the parish are the trustees of the late Countess Seafield and John Peter Grant esq. D.L., J.P. The area, including Rothiemurchus, comprises 78,684 acres; rateable value, £13,676; the population in 1911 was 1,943. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was Duthil, 1,345 and Rothiemurchus, 243.

FORT AUGUSTUS is a village and quoad sacra parish in the united parish of Boleskine and Abertarff, 30 miles north-east of Fort William, and 33 south-west of Inverness, at the extreme south point of Loch Ness, and has a terminal station on a branch from Spean Bridge, begun in 1899 and completed in 1903, of the West Highland railway; the fort from which it took its name was built in 1729 by General Wade, as the central fort of three constructed along the line of lakes extending from Loch Linnhe to Inverness, Fort William, the southernmost, having been constructed some years before by General Monk; in 1745, Prince Charles Edward's forces took Fort Augustus, but in the succeeding year it was recovered by the Duke of Cumberland, and continued to be a military station until 1867, when it was sold to Lord Lovat, and shortly afterwards a Benedictine monastery was erected on its site; the moat and two of the bastions being left; the monastic buildings, including a cloister, were designed by Pugin, and include a hospice and a college. The college, after being used as a V.A.D. hospital during the Great War, was reopened in 1920. A new church in Norman style, designed by Reginald Fairleigh of Edinburgh, was opened in 1917, the choir and two chapels now being complete (1921), while the nave and sanctuary remain yet to be built. Bryceson's famous organ, formerly in the Albert Palace, London, has been placed in the new church. There are also Established, Free and United Free churches. The Bathymetric survey of Loch Ness, completed in May, 1903, shows it to have a depth of from 300 to 750 feet, the descent on both sides being for the most part very steep, and the central portion flat: at one point a depth of 316 feet was reached at a distance of only 150 feet from the shore, the greatest ascertained depth being in the centre off Lower Lenie, where it is 751 feet from Glen Moriston, to within 2 miles of Abriachan, a stretch of about 12 miles; its general depth exceeds 700 feet, and an area of 500 feet in depth extends without a break from within a mile of Fort Augustus to Abriachan, the breadth varying from one-half to one-third of a mile: the bottom of the loch is nearly 700 feet below the level of the sea. The population in 1911 was 791.

FORT GEORGE, see ARDERSIER.

FORT WILLIAM is a town, port and police burgh in the parish of Kilmallie, in the Lorn poor combination, and is the head of a sheriff court; it lies a little south of the entrance to the Caledonian Canal, at the head of Loch Linnhe, 65 miles south-west from Inverness. The fort from which it takes its name, standing at the east end of the town, was originally constructed by Cromwell, in 1655, and rebuilt by William III. in 1690; it stood two sieges in 1715 and 1745, and up to 1854 was garrisoned by a company of a line regiment: after the Crimean war the 71st Highlanders and the Lancashire militia were successively stationed here, but in 1860 the fort was sold by the Government to Mrs. Cameron Campbell, of Monzie: the former barracks were converted into dwelling houses, and the moat into gardens, but the whole has since been converted into a goods station for the West Highland railway. This place has been successively known by the names of Gordonsburgh, Duncansburgh and Maryburgh. The West Highland railway from Helensburgh has a station here. Communication is also maintained with Glasgow and Inverness by the Caledonian and Crinan canals daily during the summer, and twice a week in winter. The chief industry is the distilling of whisky; the famous "Long John's Dew of Ben Nevis" being manufactured here, but the town is also the centre of a large sheep farming district. Fishing is carried on to a small extent, and the town is a place of very considerable resort for the tourist and the traveller in the summer months. A part of the river Lochy, to the north-east of the town, affords good fishing. A substantial stone quay was erected here in 1834 by the Society for Promoting the British Fisheries, and by subscriptions, at an expense of about £1,000. A suspension bridge of 250 feet span was erected over the river Lochy by the late Donald Cameron esq. of Lochiel, at a cost of about £2,000, but is now the property of the District Council. The town is lighted by electricity, and there is an abundant supply of excellent water. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Bank of Scotland, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. Fort William is governed by Police Commissioners. The sheriff substitute holds a court here every Thursday during the session, and a justice of the peace court is held on the third Tuesday in April and the fourth Tuesday in October. St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, erected during the period 1875-84 on the site of the old church built in 1817, is an edifice of red granite, in the Early Gothic style, consisting of chancel, nave and a tower with spire containing 4 bells: all the windows are stained, and include memorial windows to Bishops Low, Ewing and Mackarness, of the diocese of Argyll and the Isles, and to Dr. Pusey, of Oxford: the church affords 250 sittings. The Rev. Donald Maccoilchynie Shaw has been rector since 1915. The Established Church is a building in the Gothic style, with a manse and fine garden adjoining, and there is also a United Free Church with a manse. The Reading Room and Library were presented to the town by Mrs. Cameron Lucy as a memorial to her mother, Mrs. Cameron Campbell, of Monzie. On a rocky elevation known as "the Craigs" is an arch, once forming the entrance to the fort: here also within an enclosure is a fountain erected as a memorial to Daniel Stewart MacLaren esq. some time Procurator Fiscal, and on the summit of a rock stands a monument to Ewen MacLachlan of Lochaber, scholar and poet. In 1847 an obelisk of granite, 30 feet high, was set up by Sir Duncan Cameron bart. to his brother, Capt. Peter Cameron H.E.T.C.S. d. at Blackheath in 1843. In High street is a monument, erected in 1852, to the late William Kennedy esq. M.D.; near the entrance to the hall of the United Free Church is a marble statue of Dr. Chalmers, and on the Parade is a bronze statue of the late Donald Cameron esq. of Lochiel. The Belford Hospital, erected and endowed in 1865 by the late Andrew Belford, of Glenfintaig, for the inhabitants of Lochaber, is a plain but substantial building at the east end of the town, and will hold 30 patients. A Fever Hospital, for 8 patients, connected with this institution, was erected in 1894. The principal hotels are the Palace, Argyll, the North British Station, Caledonian, Highland, Central, Imperial, Ben Nevis, Alexandra, and the West End. Markets are held at different periods throughout the year, and there are weekly auction sales of live stock. Fairs are held on the fourth Wednesday in March, the second Wednesdays in June and November, Tuesday after second Thursday in July, and Tuesday fortnight before Falkirk Tryst in October. Col. Donald Walter Cameron, of Lochiel, Sir John M. Stirling-Maxwell bart. D.L. Mrs. Cameron Lucy, Mrs. Ellice, and the trustees of the late Lord Abinger are the principal landowners. The area of the burgh is 148 acres; population in 1911, 2,002.

GLENELG is an extensive parish on the coast, at the western extremity of the mainland, about 20 miles in length from north to south by a breadth of 10 to 15; it is divided into three districts, viz.:—Glenelg, Knoydart and Morar by Loch Hourn and Loch Nevis, and is bounded on the north and north-west by the Sound of Sleat, on the north-east by the county of Ross, east by the parishes of Kilmonivaig and Kilmallie, and south by Arisaig and Moidart, and is in Lorn poor combination, and small debt court districts of Fort William and Inverness. The village is on Glenelg Bay, about 18 miles south-west from Strome Ferry station on the Dingwall and Skye section of the Highland railway, and about 16 miles by road and 8 by water south-east from Kyle of Lochalsh, the terminal station of the same line. The parish is hilly and mountainous; the most prominent heights are Ben Screel (3,190 feet), The Saddle (3,317 feet), Druim Cosaidh (2,558 feet) and Daorben (3,341 feet). There are Established, Free and Roman Catholic churches. This place gave the title of baron in 1835 to the Rt. Hon. Charles Grant M.P., P.C. but it became extinct on his death, 23 April, 1866.

ARNISDALE is a village in the parish of Glenelg, situated about 13 miles south from the village of that name, on the northern shore of Loch Hourn.

MORAR is a district on the southern border of the parish; it lies between Loch Nevis and Loch Morar. The district has a station on the North British railway and is 39 miles from Fort William.

The principal landowners are Arthur Salvin Bowlby esq. Col. James Evan Bruce Baillie M.V.O., V.D., J.P. Lord Lovat K.T., K.C.M.G., K.C.V.O., C.B., D.S.O., A.D.C. Henry Birkbeck esq. D.L., J.P. Sir John Sutherland Harmood-Banner M.P. James Scott esq. the Board of Agriculture for Scotland and the Forestry Commissioners. The soil is various, some portions fertile, and agriculture and fishing are the chief occupations of the inhabitants. The area of the entire parish comprises 134,774 acres; rateable value, £7,100; population in 1911, 1,670 in the civil and 481 in the ecclesiastical parish.

KNOYDART is a quoad sacra parish erected from the civil parish of Glenelg; it lies between Loch Hourn and Loch Nevis, and contains the village of Inverie on Inverie Bay, 10 miles south-east of the Isle of Ornsay. Population in 1911, 1,157. Here is an Established church.

MALLAIG is a quoad sacra parish of Knoydart, situated at the entrance of Loch Nevis, with a terminal station on the North British railway and is 42 miles from Fort William. The principal industry is its fishing, and it is also a calling place for the west coast steamers. There is an Established Mission church and a United Free church. The Bank of Scotland has a branch here. Population, 800.

INVERNESS

INVERNESS, the capital of the Highlands, and of the large county of its name, and the head of a poor combination, is situated on the banks of the river Ness, near to its confluence with the Beauly Firth, and commands the eastern approach to the Great Glen of Scotland (Glen-more-na-h'-Albyn). It is a great railway centre of lines from south, and to the east, north and the north-west. The distance by rail from Edinburgh is 195 miles N.N.W., via Fife, and 213 via Stirling; 108½ N. by W. from Aberdeen; 208 N. from Glasgow; 199¼ N.W. from Dundee; 168 S. from Thurso; 144 N.N.W. from Perth; 25 S.W. from Forres; and 37 S.W. from Elgin. We learn from Richard's "Itinerary" (one of the oldest documents extant relative to the affairs of Great Britain, and referring to the period between A.D. 138 and 170) that Inverness was one of the ten cities of Britain enjoying the "Jus Latinitatis;" only two others in Scotland are mentioned—Perth and Dumbarton. After the Romans withdrew, Inverness became the seat of the Pictish monarchy. Here Macbeth, the great Lord of Ross and Moray, had a castle, which Boethius assigns as the scene of Duncan's murder; Buchanan's relation is to the same effect, and Shakespeare's play of "Macbeth" has served to make the place historically famous. It is supposed to have stood a short distance east of the town, upon an eminence called the "Crown," at the north-east corner of which there are still extensive remains. After the fall of Macbeth, Malcolm Canmore destroyed it, and erected a new castle, which was in existence until 1746, when it was blown up during the rebellion. The County Buildings now stand upon its site.

The situation of Inverness is so singularly beautiful as to have compelled a recognition of its claims to that character, and in its great charter "its good and pleasant situation" is there noticed as one of the reasons for its endowment as a royal burgh, for which it is said it received a charter in 1607 from Malcolm Canmore; and there are on record four charters in its favour from King William the Lion, besides various subsequent ones by several of his successors. Its great, or, as it is called, "golden" charter, is that which was granted by James VI. in 1591, and which confirms previous grants. The municipal government is vested in a provost, four bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and fourteen councillors, in all twenty-one, who have the management of considerable charity funds. The county of Inverness, inclusive of all burghs situated therein and the Isle of Skye but excluding the Western isles, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament. The environs of Inverness combine picturesque beauty in detail, with magnificence as a whole, uniting the characters of a rich, open, lowland country, with those of the wildest Alpine scenery, while to all is added a series of maritime views; the walks in the neighbourhood are picturesque, especially along the banks of the river to the wooded islands of the Ness, along the sea shore, or by the margin of the canal; other points of interest are the singularly-shaped hill of Tomnahurich, or "hill of the fairies;" the summit of Craig Phadric; Druidical circles in the "Leys;" Clava, a literal "City of Tombs," and Drumossie Moor, where the last of the Stuarts, "Bonnie Prince Charlie," sustained his final defeat. The greater part of the town lies on the eastern part of the Ness—a broad, clear, and equable flowing stream—which is here crossed by a suspension bridge erected at the expense of the Government, and maintained by an annual assessment levied over the northern counties; this structure, costing £26,000, takes the place of the old stone bridge of seven arches, erected in 1688, which, on the 25th of Jan. 1849, was carried away by the overflowing of the river. There are in addition two suspension bridges for foot passengers, the lower of which was opened on the 2nd of May, 1882: the stout wooden traffic bridge, erected in 1807 at the lower part of the town, which had done duty for nearly 100 years, was replaced at the end of the year 1895 by a modern lattice girder bridge 28 feet wide, the entire length being 350 feet, and costing about £7,000.

The principal streets in the business parts of the town are Union street, immediately opposite the railway station, High street, Church street, Academy street, Castle street, Queensgate, and Bridge street, which have fine public buildings and places of business. The Castle of Inverness was built in 1836 upon the site of the old castle erected by Malcolm Canmore, at a cost of £10,000, from the designs of Mr. Burn, architect, of Edinburgh. It contains a court-room, a commodious county hall, and various suitable apartments for judicial business. In the County buildings is a painting, by Raeburn, of the late Charles Grant, of Glenelg, long M.P. for the county; and in a niche of the staircase is a bust, by the late Patrick Park R.S.A. of the late William Fraser-Tytler, of Aldourie, many years sheriff and convener of the county. The sheriff's ordinary court is held there every Thursday and the small debt court every Friday during session time, for the decision of claims for sums not exceeding £20. The County Council buildings adjoin the court house buildings, and are also in the Castellated style. His Majesty's Prison is off Porterfield road.

The Town Hall, which occupies the site of the old structure facing the Exchange, owes its origin to a bequest, in 1873, by Mr. Grant, of £5,000 for the purpose of aiding in its erection, which was accomplished between 1878 and 1882, at a cost of about £15,000; in 1905-6 an extensive addition was made at a cost of about £4,200. The style of architecture is Early Decorated Gothic, with details of a French character, and the building occupies an area of about 700 square yards, with a frontage of 78 feet to High street, and 120 in Castle street. It is mainly of two storeys in height, and has a richly ornamented central gable flanked by round towers, and surmounted by a spirelet; the main staircase is enriched with heraldic stained windows. The large Hall is 66 feet long, 35 feet broad and 33 feet high; the ceiling being panelled and richly decorated with heraldic emblems, and in the centre is an orchestral gallery with musicians' room behind. The hall is lighted by fourteen windows filled with stained glass bearing the arms of the Highland clans, and figures symbolical of Art, Science, Law, Agriculture, Education, Literature, as well as the Arms of the Corporate Trades of the burgh, and the Royal Arms of Scotland. There are also portraits of the late Prince Consort, Duncan Forbes, of Culloden, James Robertson, of Aultnaskiach, Sir Henry C. Macandrew, Alexander Ross LL.D. Dr. John Mackenzie, of Ellanach, Alexander Fraser, William MacBean, Arthur D. Ross, J. A. Gossip, John Birnie and other former provosts; & fine copy of Ramsay's original portrait of Flora Macdonald, President Forbes, Hector Munro, of Foulis, some time M.P. for the burgh, busts of the late Rev. Dr. Macdonald, the late Mr. A. Penrose Hay, some time chamberlain of the burgh, the late Dr. Carruthers, the late Major-Gen. William Macbean V.C. a native of the town, and Mr. William Mackintosh, a former provost. The colours of the now defunct 3rd Battalion Royal Regiment are suspended here. The building was formally opened by H.R.H the late Duke of Coburg (Duke of Edinburgh) on the 14th Jan. 1882. A fountain, the gift of Dr. George Forbes, occupies the front of the Exchange. The time honoured palladium of the burgh—Clachnacuddin, and the ancient market Cross occupy a position in front of the Town Hall. Sir Walter Scott calls this stone the Charrer Stone of the Burgh. The word is Celtic and means the "stone of the tubs," for it was here the young women used to rest their tubs when coming from the river Ness, and around it the old burghers gathered for their social talk.

The Highland Club House is in High street. The Young Men's Christian Association, at the corner of High street and Castle street, was built at a cost of about £3,500, and consists of library, hall, and class rooms. The Theatre, in Bank street, was erected from designs by Messrs. Matthews and Lawrie, architects, late of Inverness. The Free Library and Museum, in Castle Wynd, completed at a cost of £3,800, to which the late Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo, contributed a donation of £2,000, was opened on the 14th October, 1881, by Joseph Mitchell esq. of Viewfield. The library contains 14,000 volumes, and is supported by a rate levied under the Libraries Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1887. The Northern Meeting held here annually in Sept. consists of noblemen, proprietors, and gentlemen in seven of the northern counties, associated for the purpose of fostering the games and sports peculiar to the Highlands; it has rooms in Church street, and a pavilion and park in Ardross street. The Inverness-shire Farmers' Society, and numerous other institutions, hold their meetings in the town at stated periods.

The Working Men's Club, in Bridge street, erected at the cost of the late Donald M'Dougall esq. contains a reading room, billiard room and lecture hall, and is held in trust by the Town Council. The Northern Infirmary was erected in 1804, on the west bank of the river, between the Ness Islands and the town. The Inverness Forbes Dispensary for the sick poor, in Huntly street, is supported by voluntary contributions. The Northern Counties Institute for the Blind, in Ardconnel street, opened in March, 1881, at a cost of about £2,000, is available for 18 blind persons, who are taught to read and write, and do various descriptions of fancy and other work. The Royal Academy, in Midmills road, was established in 1792, for the purpose of supplying a higher education: it received the Royal Warrant and Charter in 1793; the building, erected in 1894 at a cost of over £10,000, is of red sandstone, in the Elizabethan style; in 1913 a new block was added for the accommodation of the Science and Art Departments and for physical training, at a cost of £9,000; it is under the control of the County Education Authority. The Farraline Park Institution, or Bell's School, in Margaret street, was established in 1842, by a bequest of the late Dr. Bell LL.D. of Madras, and in 1888 transferred to the School Board, and in 1920 to the County Education Authority. The High Public School, in Kingsmills road, erected at a cost of about £8,000, is also managed by the local School Management Committee.

The High Parish church, in Church street, is an ancient structure, rebuilt at the end of the 18th century, and having a tower and spire; St. Mary's Parish church is in the same street, and the West Parish church in Huntly street. The United Free High church, in Fraser street, is a modern edifice with a spire; Free North church, in Bank street, erected in 1893, is a building of stone, in the Gothic style, designed by Messrs. Ross and McBeth, of Inverness; East United Free church is in Academy street; West United Free church, in Upper Kessock street; the United Free church, in Ness bank; the Wesleyan Methodist chapel, in Inglis street; the Catholic church, in Huntly street; St. John's Episcopal church, in Southside road, St. Michael's Episcopal church, in Abban street, and the Episcopal cathedral, in Ardross street. The county of Inverness is divided between the sees of Moray and Argyll and the Episcopal cathedral of St. Andrew at Inverness has been constituted the head of the united diocese of Moray, Ross and Caithness. The cathedral, finely situated on the west bank of the river Ness, was erected at a cost of over £20,000, the foundation stone being laid 17 Oct. 1866, by the late Dr. Longley, then Archbishop of Canterbury, and the edifice opened for divine service in Sept. 1869: it is built of light red sandstone from Conon quarry, near Dingwall, with dressings of Covesea freestone, in the Early Decorated style, from designs by Dr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness, and consists of apsidal choir, transepts, clerestoried nave, aisles, octagonal chapter house and western towers: the length of the nave is 90 feet and of the choir and apse 60 feet; the width across the nave and aisles is also 60 feet, and the total length, measured externally, 166 feet; the towers, each 100 feet high, are arranged in four stages, with double buttresses at the angles, and the belfry storeys have a tripler of lights in each face; it was originally intended to add spires, but the towers are at present finished with a simple arcaded parapet; in the north tower is a fine peal, provided and hung by subscription, as a memorial to the Most Rev. Robert Eden D.D. Bishop of Moray, Ross and Caithness, 1851-86, and Primus of Scotland: there is a fine western doorway under a lofty triangular head, filled with open tracery and enriched with crocketing; the pinnacled buttresses on either side, as well as those of the tower, are ornamented with canopied niches, and some of these contain statues; the lower stage of the north tower forms a porch and has an elegant arched entrance, and the corresponding stage of the south tower serves as a baptistery, and contains a white marble font in the form of an angel holding a shell, adapted from a design of Thorwaldsen; the west end of the nave, between the towers, is enclosed by a stone screen, and above the crossing rises a graceful open lantern with crocketed spirelet. The choir stalls, erected in memory of the late Bishop Kelly, were completed in 1909 at a cost of £1,000, and are of Austrian wainscot oak.

Commerce, Trade &c.—At the town harbour and Thornbush quay, and also at the Caledonian Canal wharves, within a mile of the town, vessels of considerable tonnage may receive or discharge their cargoes, while large ships have excellent anchorage in Kessock roads, just above the confluence of the river with the sea. The exports from this port are chiefly grain, potatoes, wool, timber, salmon &c. The imports comprise timber, barley, oil seed cake and coal. The total value of all imports in 1919 was £202,808, of which £189,560 was oil (petroleum). The exports amounted in the same year to £7,720. The number of sailing and steam vessels in the general coasting trade during the year 1918 was 1,053 of 210,166 tonnage arrived, and departed 1,130 of 212,568 tons. In the same year 135 vessels of 1,951 tons were registered and 452 fishing boats of 8,387 tonnage were registered as belonging to the port. There is a slipway for repairing vessels at the Thornbush wharf belonging to the Rose Street Foundry and Engineering Co. Limited, and ship and boat building yards, two manufactories for woollen cloths, two aërated water manufactories, an iron foundry, and three distilleries. The Canal basin has every facility for carrying on an extensive trade.

There are eight banking companies established in Inverness, and a savings bank. The premises of the Bank of Scotland, erected for the Caledonian Bank in 1849, form a handsome building of freestone on the north side of High street. The following newspapers are published here: The "Inverness Courier," the "Northern Chronicle, the "Highland Times," the "Highland News" on Saturday, and the "Football Times."

The chief hotels are the Station Hotel, adjoining the railway station; the Royal, opposite the railway station; the Caledonian, in Church street; the Waverley Temperance Hotel, in Union street; the Imperial, in Academy street; the Palace, in Ness walk and the Queensgate (temperance) Hotel, in Queensgate. Inverness being the centre to which the principal lines of road in the Highlands converge —having the Caledonian canal on the one hand, and the Moray Firth on the other— maintains a rapid, frequent and easy intercourse, both by land and water, with all parts of the kingdom. It is also the head quarters of the Highland Railway, whose large works afford employment to about a thousand artisans, besides numerous officials.

The Inverness markets are held on Monday, Tuesday and Friday of each week.
